Not a Little of Responsibility Lies with Higher Courts, Declares Justice.

NO DANGER OF REVOLUTION

Honest Wealth Has Nothing to Fear from Plain People, He Says—Women's Suffrage a Pressing Question.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 22.—Justice David J. Brewer of the United States Supreme Court in an interview to-day on problems of the American Nation, said it was undoubtedly true that there was a cumbersomeness in our legal procedure which had resulted in great delays, much expense, and sometimes injustice, and there was no duty more imperative upon the bar and bench than to do what they could to simplify matters and put technicalities out of the way and see to it that substantial justice was administered.

"No one," said the Justice, "appreciates this any more fully than do the Judges of our higher courts, and yet it must be confessed that some of them are responsible for not a little of the delay. Our present President, having had experience as Solicitor General and as a Judge of one of our higher Federal courts, will, I am sure, give much attention to the subject, and we may hope that as far as the National judiciary system is concerned, his administration will be productive of great and beneficial results; and while the Nation cannot legislate for the States in that respect, yet the example made by the Nation I have no doubt will be largely followed by the States.

"Taking, as sometimes happens, four to six weeks to empanel a jury, is an outrage. The reversing of a judgment by an Appellate Court on the ground of a mere technicality when substantial justice has been administered is another outrage. The National Bar Association has recently adopted canons of ethics for the conduct of the profession, and it is striving, although having no legal authority to bind any legislators, to get our judicial system on a more just and better basis. It is deserving of the encouragement of everybody.

"We have our difficulties to-day, as our fathers did in their time—not the same, but none the less difficulties. But our fathers triumphed, and we shall do the same. Just as long as you have a judiciary in this Nation and State, intelligent, honest, and fearless, you need never fear that we are going to run the way of those republics which ended in the supremacy of the mob.

Wealth Honestly Accumulated.

"The building up of great fortunes," Mr. Brewer declared, "is not strange, when business transactions can be arranged by telegraph and telephone to all parts of the land and to all parts of the world. In a few minutes contracts are made that will bring great results, either of success or disaster. But the accumulation of wealth, if honestly made, ought not to create any prejudice, and as the ways in which the fortunes were accumulated are made known will not result in any prejudice. Of course, there will always be some who will be dissatisfied if they are not as fortunate as their neighbors.

"It is true that in the complexities of to day's business it is not always easy to distinguish between wealth honestly acquired and that dishonestly acquired. Monopolies are being formed all the time more or less complete. But combination of capital is in itself no more to be condemned than the privileges acquired by it subject to condemnation. One duty which really rests upon men who have acquired wealth honestly is to recognize the fact that they owe to the public the moral duty of using some portion of their wealth for the public good. The more our wealthy men come into the habit of helping educational and charitable institutions and organizations, the more they will disabuse the minds of the less fortunate of their prejudices.

"Undoubtedly there is not a little social unrest because of this accumulation of capital—of wealth—in the hands of a comparatively few. But on the other hand there is a great body of our people who have acquired homes, who are enjoying comfortable livelihoods, and who deprecate any disturbances which will affect their present conditions of comfort. It is true there are a great many in the slums or suffering from want or work, and they are the ones to whom the demagogue makes his most effective appeal. Abraham Lincoln said he relied upon the plain people, and he did not mean by that the denizens of the slums. He meant the great body of farmers and those who are living decently, but necessarily frugally, in the cities. They to-day are the great body of the American people, and upon them the destinies of this Republic rest.

Dishonest Wealth Will be Attacked.

"Without vindictiveness, but with fairness, they will pursue those whom they think have acquired wealth dishonestly. They will attack by legal means all schemes by which men make money without giving adequate value in return, and, on the other hand, they will just as firmly resist the efforts to produce anything like a revolution here. The parents of many of them—most of them—fought for the Union. They believe this is the best Government and best form of government in the world, and they are going to seek to correct the evils that have crept in without in any manner undermining the present system of government.

"We have grave questions before us, questions which we must meet and meet without prejudice, meet fairly, consider reasonably, and strive to decide honestly. One is the negro question. The negroes don't seem to be troublesome up here, but go down South, and in some States the major portion of the population is colored. If they were all as intelligent as some colored men I know there would be no trouble, but there is a vast mass of ignorance and passion there which has to be controlled, and we in the North cannot control it. It must be controlled and regulated by our brothers of the South. And instead of trying to make the work more burdensome and difficult, it is the duty of every true man to lend a helping hand to every effort on the part of our Southern brethren to give a better life and a more intelligent life to the negro. Then we have the colonial question. We have the Philippines, with several million people, and Porto Rico. I remember talking with one of the earnest defenders of the last Administration, and I said to him: 'After all, we have got them. We must do the best we can.' 'No,' [illegible] said, 'we haven't got them; they've got us.' But, however that is, they are under

CAN'T STAND SILENT HUSBAND

He Quit Talking Right After His Wedding—Wife Sues for Divorce.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 22.—Because she couldn't stand the nerve-straining silence of her husband, who sat moodily around the house day after day without muttering a word, Mrs. Lizzie Beekman has brought suit for divorce from Frank J. Beekman, before Charles J. Parker, as referee.

The husband, still adhering to the silence that brought on the family jar, does not contest the suit, and the referee will advise a decree for the wife.

Mr. and Mrs. Beekman have lived in Asbury Park since their marriage in 1905.

Several of their neighbors who testified yesterday said that they hadn't heard Beekman utter half a dozen words in as many years.

Mrs. Beekman complained that she couldn't stand the strain. She said she had tried every way to induce her husband to talk, but to no avail. In Summer, she said, he sat in the yard all day and long into the night as silent as a wooden man, and in the Winter he kept close to the stove and burned the wood and coal that she carried in, but said never a word.

Mr. and Mrs. Beekman were married at 7 o'clock in the morning. Beekman talked just enough to get through with the ceremony and then hurried away to work. From that day his silence began.

Mrs. Beekman says he talked all right when he courted her, and that she bore with his subsequent silence, hoping that he would get over it, but that her husband not only stopped talking, but, after a time, quit working, too.

CHANNEL FLIGHTS TO-DAY.

Latham and Bleriot Will Both Attempt Crossing to Dover.

DOVER, July 22.—Hubert Latham and M. Bleriot will attempt to cross the Channel in their aeroplanes to-morrow.

CALAIS, July 22.—The weather to-day was unfavorable for making an attempt to fly across the English Channel. The betting as to which aeronaut will be the first to leave Calais is spirited.

Hubert Latham, who early this week made an unsuccessful attempt to fly across, is the favorite at odds of 3 to 2. M. Bleriot and Count de Lambert are quoted at 2 to 1 and 4 to 1, respectively.

BERLIN, July 22.—The French balloon Emulation du Nord landed in the Grünewald this morning. It ascended with twenty-five other balloons from Brussels yesterday and made the journey at an average rate of twenty-six miles an hour. Mm. Eslande and Crombez clambered out of the car into the thicket and reached the ground safely.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 22.—The new Russian military dirigible balloon Rossia made its first ascent this afternoon from the balloon park in the suburbs of this city. It is under the charge of officers of the Aeronautic Corps and is now carrying out a series of successful manoeuvres, during which it visited St. Petersburg.

WEATHER BALLOON ASTRAY.

Breaks Away and Sails Off with Some Valuable Instruments.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Officials of the United States Weather Bureau are anxiously awaiting news of the flight of one of its balloons, which broke away from its moorings at Mount Weather, Virginia, to-day with some valuable weather instruments as ballast.

The balloon is a small spherical one, 12 feet in diameter. It had been held captive at Mount Weather for meterological purposes, but at 2:10 o'clock this afternoon it sailed off southeastward, mounting higher and higher, until it reached an altitude of one mile. It was almost full of hydrogen gas, and probably will stay in the air three or four days.

HERRON FOR VICE MAYOR.

Taft's Brother-in-Law to Run as Democrat in Cincinnati.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, July 22.—William C. Herron, brother-in-law of President Taft, is to be the candidate for the Democratic nomination for Vice Mayor of Cincinnati at the November election. He has been chosen by the managers of the Alfred M. Cohen faction, and will without doubt be taken up by the John Weld Peck and Ira D. Washburn factions. These three men are prominent in the Democratic candidacy for nomination for Mayor.

George W. Harris got the consent of Mr. Herron to make the race on Thursday. His name has been placed on the ballot of the Cohen faction, and will go down on those of the other candidates. Mr. Herron is 45 years old, a lawyer, and a member of the prominent Herron family of Cincinnati, into which President Taft married. He has always been a Democrat, and did not even vote for his brother-in-law last November. It will be the second job in a political way for him, as the only position he has held heretofore was membership in the old Board of Elections, which was ruled out by legislation sveral years ago. So far Mr. Herron's brother-in-law has not been apprised of his candidacy.

SCHMITTBERGER SUES SELF.

Inspector, as Executor of His Wife's Will, Wants to Repay Himself $10,000.

On the application of Chief Inspector Max F. Schmittberger, a referee was appointed yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Bischoff, with instructions to report as speedily as possible on testimony to be taken in an action brought by the Inspector against himself and his son, William G., as executors of the will of his wife. The codefendants are George C., Max F., Jr., Sadie A., Anne M., Oswald O., and Warner H. Schmittberger, sons and daughters of the Inspector, and John Luke.

In 1897 Mrs. Schmittberger came into possession of property at 254 West Thirtieth Street, and at her death Luke held a mortgage on it for $10,000. At her death in 1895 the Inspector became the life tenant in the realty, and as he stated in his petition, in order to protect the estate and prevent foreclosure, he borrowed money to pay the mortgage, which became due on Jan. 1, 1908. This he did, he says, without taking legal advice, and believing he could reimburse himself by joining with the co-executor and placing another mortgage.

Later he discovered that by a provision of his wife's will the property could not be mortgaged, nor could the property be sold. He is out the $10,000, says he needs the money, and under these circumstances wants the court to cancel his discharge of the mortgage to Luke, that it be reinstated, and reassigned to him by Luke.

BRIAND, SOCIALIST, FOR FRENCH PREMIER

Man Who Put Through Separation Law Invited to Reconstruct Clemenceau Cabinet.

MEANS MORE RADICALISM

Briand Less Conservative Than His Former Chief and Will Be Surrounded with Advocates of Socialism.

PARIS, July 22.—Aristide Briand, brilliant scholar, orator, and avowed Socialist, and author of the final chapters of the separation law, was summoned to the Elysée Palace to-night and asked to reconstruct the Clemenceau Cabinet. M. Briand promised his answer to-morrow, stating in the course of an interview that unless he could unite the Republican groups he would decline the post of Premier.

M. Briand was Minister of Justice and Worship in the Clemenceau Cabinet, and he is consulting with his colleagues to-night.

President Fallières, on the advice of the parliamentary leaders, whom he was constitutionally obliged to consult, intended to make the first offer of the Premiership to Léon Bourgeois, former Minister of Foreign Affairs, but delay in M. Bourgeois's arrival in Paris and doubt regarding his acceptance induced the President to save time by offering the Premiership to M. Briand in the first instance.

It is expected that the reconstruction of the Cabinet will be effected by shifting some of the portfolios and retaining all the Ministers except MM. Picquart, Picard, and Milliès-Lacroix, Ministers of War, the Navy, and the Colonies respectively.

The programme of the retiring Government will be adopted, but probably will be extended to include the passage at the October session of a bill relating to electoral reform, which provides for voting by departments, with proportional representation, instead of the present choice of Deputies by arrondissements or small districts.

During the day considerable opposition to M. Briand developed, especially among the more conservative Senators and Radicals, who dominate the party of the Republican majority, on the ground that the selection of a Socialist as the head of the Government would be equivalent to proclaiming the bankruptcy of the Radicals.

Sixty Radical-Socialists, headed by Deputy Dubier, have voted not to support any but a Cabinet headed by a Radical or a Radical-Socialist. Consequently predictions are freely made to-night that M. Briand will fail in his efforts to form a Ministry which can command a majority. On the other hand, M. Jaurès, leader of the Socialists in the Chamber, and his followers have come forward with offers of support.

Should M. Briand succeed in forming a Cabinet, as his friends believe he will, the tendencies of the new Ministry will be distinctly more Socialistic than those of the outgoing Cabinet. M. Briand is opposed to the dissolution of the revolutionary General Federation of Labor, which M. Clemenceau favored, and M. Barthou, Minister of Public Works, and M. Viviani, Minister of Labor, have championed Socialistic doctrines. The retention of M. Pichon, the Foreign Minister, in any Cabinet formed would be a source of general satisfaction.

A Briand cabinet would be exceedingly distasteful to the moneyed classed, who at least knew that Clemenceau was not afraid to resist revolutionary tendencies. The Conservatives, however, believe that a Briand cabinet would be short lived, and find consolation in the theory that the further the pendulum swings in one direction the further it will swing back in the other. The moneyed interests are hoping against hope that M. Caillaux, Minister of Finance, will not succeed himself in the new Ministry, but a majority of the leaders who are committed to the income tax, the workmen's pension scheme, and other social reforms consider his retention imperative in order to avoid a popular misinterpretation with regard to his retirement in the face of the coming elections.

M. Clemenceau seems in no way downcast by his defeat, and was as debonnair and witty as usual when he left the Ministry last night for his private residence, which he did not abandon when he became Premier. He said laughingly to a friend: "You see the advantage of not living at the Ministry. I came here with nothing but an umbrella, and I am leaving with a cane."

Despite the storm of indignation vented on M. Clemenceau for his attack on M. Delcassé, even the former's worst enemies admit that he told the truth, as it has long been an open secret that M. Delcassé, relying on the friendship of England, wanted to risk a war with Germany when he was Foreign Minister in 1905; but the revelations then made, showing the unpreparedness of the French Army and Navy, compelled the Government to yield to the German threat, dismiss M. Delcassé, and take the Moroccan dispute to the Algeciras Conference.

Briand's Rise Rapid.

The rise of Aristide Briand has been so rapid that the biographical dictionaries have not had time to notice him. The most recorded outside of France about him is contained in newspaper clippings, which feature his work on the legislation separating the Church and State in France, and, most talked about of all, his declaration for trial marriages, divorce by mutual agreement, and free love.

The latest edition of the French Who's Who says that M. Briand was born in Nantes on March 28, 1862, and that he attended school in that city. There is no mention of university training, but he became a lawyer. He was elected to represent the Loire in the Chamber of Deputies. Five years ago he was known only among his own party, the Socialists.

He was appointed reporter of the Church and State Separation Bill, and soon became recognized as a high authority on the subject. He aimed to draw up a bill broadly liberal in spirit, but devoid of fanaticism, and designed to assure freedom of worship and conscience. For his work on that bill he was elevated to the post of Minister of Public Instruction and Worship in 1906.

During the Church and State troubles he acted with firmness and moderation, and after the death of M. Guyot-Dessaigne on Dec. 31, 1907, he was appointed Minister of Justice, retaining also the Ministry of Worship.

It was last year that his name got in the newspapers as one who favored trial marriages, divorce by mutual agreement, and free love. Early in the year Paul Bourget's play, "Un Divorce," presented at the Vaudeville in Paris, caused a sensation. It dealt with the divorce question, holding that marriage was a sacrament, and fulminating against the idea of divorce.

Though the Bourget play preached against the ideas of the Minister of Justice last year, votes taken every night in the very theatre in which it was produced were overwhelmingly in favor of M. Briand's ideas as against those of M. Bourget.

ROOSEVELT OBTAINS RARE BEASTS FOR ZOO

National Park in Washington to Get Lions, Cheetahs, Gazelles, and Great Birds.

GIFT OF G. W. McMILLAN

Will Be Brought from Ranch at Juja, British East Africa, by a Special Commissioner.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The Smithsonian Institution has received word from Lieut. Col. Mearns, the former army surgeon now with the Roosevelt hunting expedition in Africa, that through the efforts of former President Roosevelt the National Zoological Park in Washington is to receive a collection of animals and birds taken in that part of Africa where Mr. Roosevelt has been hunting.

The collection is the gift of G. W. McMillan of Juja, near Nairobi, British East Africa. It was on the McMillan ranch that Col. Roosevelt did some of his first African hunting. It does not appear from the letter of Col. Mearns whether or no Col. Roosevelt or his party captured any of the animals about to be shipped.

A statement issued by the Smithsonian Institution to-day says that the collection includes eleven large mammals and three large birds, all in fine condition and for the most part well broken to captivity, as follows: A male and female lion, two years old; a male and two female lions, seventeen months old; a female leopard, a pet of Mrs. McMillan; two cheetahs, a warthog, two years old; one Thompson's and one Grant's gazelle, well grown; a large eagle of unusual species, a small vulture, and a large buteo.

Specimens of none of these except the lion and the leopard are at present contained in the park. The collection is now at the farm near Nairobi. A. B. Baker, Assistant Superintendent of the National Zoological Park, has been designated to take charge of its transportation to this country, and for this purpose will sail from New York on the steamer Arabic on Saturday. On his way to Nairobi Mr. Baker will stop at London, Hamburg, and Mombassa to perfect details of shipment.

It is intended to secure for the park from Henry Tarleton, of one of the farms near Nairobi, two of Coke's hartbeests, a female water-buck, and several zebras, specimens of which are not now owned by the park.

ROOSEVELT AT NAIVASHA.

Inspects Live Stock at Government Experimental Farm.

NAIVASHA, British East Africa, July 22.—Col. Roosevelt and all the members of his party, with the exception of Edmund Heller, arrived here to-day from their hunting trip on the shore of Lake Naivasha.

Mr. Heller, who is the zoologist of the expedition, is staying at Capt. Attenborough's ranch.

Mr. Roosevelt stopped at the Government experimental farm this morning, and after having luncheon with the British officials inspected the live stock.

DISAPPOINTMENT KILLS HER.

Wife Facing Deportation in Husband's Absence Dies at Ellis Island.

"Died of a broken heart" was the unofficial verdict in the case of Mrs. Chane Bitterwasser, a young woman who dropped dead yesterday in the detention room at Ellis Island.

She arrived on the Cunard liner Mauretania on Friday on her way to join her husband in Gloversville, N. Y. He did not appear to take her, and she was to have been deported unless he showed up before the sailing of a Cunard liner on Saturday.

The woman worried much over the non-appearance of her husband, and each day found her in a more depressed state of mind.

She began to count the minutes which were left to her before she started back to her home in Germany. Yesterday she sat most of the morning alone, a dejected figure in one corner of the big detention room. Suddenly she arose, clutched both hands to her throat, and with a gasp fell backward. She was dead when the attendants reached her side.

Her body was taken to the Morgue, there to await the coming of some of her relatives.

BINGAMAN IN ASYLUM.

Efforts to Prove Pittsburg Friend of H. K. Thaw Is Not Insane.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., July 22.—Dr. Walter S. Bingaman, one of the leading young physicians of Pittsburg, who disappeared recently, has been confined in Dixmont Insane Asylum. Bingaman was a friend of Harry K. Thaw, and his uncle, Dr. C. F. Bingaman, has been the Thaw family physician for forty years, and was one of the leading witnesses at the trial of Harry K. Thaw in New York.

The nervous breakdown of young Dr. Bingaman appears to have been hastened by his infatuation for Katharine Frank, a German nurse. He has written her from the asylum that his relatives have locked him up because he refused to give her up and marry a rich East End girl. His relatives deny this, and say the rich girl is one of his hallucinations.

Members of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, to which Dr. Bingaman belonged, took the case up to-day. They called on the father of the unfortunate young man and on Dr. C. F. Bingaman and demanded that the case be reopened on the ground that they are not satisfied that Dr. Walter S. Bingaman is insane. They declare they will have him brought from Dixmont on a writ and his sanity tested.

Young Bingaman's close friend, Dr. Harry M. Goehring, with whom he had been associated on many cases and who was treating him at the time he was adjudged insane, has come out with a statement that he does not think Bingaman was insane, yet the patient was adjudged insane by Drs. W. F. Edmundson and Dr. J. H. McClelland, recognized medical authorities.

DR. ELIOT OUTLINES THE NEW RELIGION

Not Based on Authority or Bound by Creeds, Says Harvard's President Emeritus.

SURGEON WILL BE MINISTER

Prevention Its Watchword, Not Consolation—Says Promises of Future Have Delayed Freedom.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 22.—Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University, outlined in an address before the Harvard Summer School of Theology this afternoon his idea of the new religion—that of the twentieth century—a religion not based upon authority or dealing in promises of future compensations—a religion among whose ministers would be the skillful surgeon, whose aim would be prevention, not consolation.

"You have been studying this year," said Dr. Eliot, "about changed views of religion and increased knowledge, new ideas of God as seen along many lines; you have learned that social progress has been modified and that energy is being conserved. From these and other indications you must believe that religion is not fixed, but fluent, and that it changes from century to centpruy. Such, indeed, has been the case.

"The progress in the nineteenth century far outstripped that of similar periods, and it is fair to assume that the progress of the twentieth century will bring about what I call the new religion. First, I shall tell you what this new religion will not be, and second what it will be.

"The new religion will not be based upon authority, either spiritual or temporal; the present generation is ready to be led, but not driven. As a rule, the older Christian Churches have relied on authority. But there is now a tendency toward liberty and progress, and among educated men this feeling is irresistible. In the new religion there will be no personification of natural objects; there will be no deification of remarkable human beings, and the faith will not be racial or tribal.

"A new thought of God will be its characteristic. The twentieth century religion accepts literally St. Paul's statement: 'In Him we live and move and have our being.' This new religion will be thoroughly monotheistic. God will be so imminent that no intermediary will be needed. For every man God will be a multiplication of infinities. A humane and worthy idea of God then will be the central thought of the new religion.

"This religion rejects the idea that man is alien or a fallen being, who is hopelessly wicked. It finds such beliefs inconsistent with a worthy idea of God. Man has always attributed to man a spirit associated but independent of the body. This spirit is shown in a man's habits, in his appearance and actions—in short, it is his personality; it is the most effective part of every human being. In the crisis of a battle it is a superior soul that rallies the troops, and it appeals to souls—not to bodies.

"The new religion will admit no sacraments, except natural, hallowed customs, and it will deal with natural interpretations of such rites. Its priests will strive to improve social and industrial conditions. It will not attempt to reconcile people to present ills by the promise of future compensation. I believe the advent of just freedom for mankind has been delayed for centuries by such promises. Prevention will be the watchword of the new religion, and a skillful surgeon will be one of its ministers. It cannot supply consolation as offered by old religions, but it will reduce the need of consolation.

"The new religion will laud God's love, and will not teach condemnation for the mass of mankind. The true end of all religions and philosophy is to teach man to serve his fellow-man, and this religion will do this increasingly. It will not be bound by dogma or creed; its workings will be simple, but its field of action limitless. Its discipline will be the training in the development of co-operative good-will.

"Again and again different bodies of people such as Spiritualists and Christian Scientists have set up new cults. But the mass of people stay by the Church. Since there will be undoubtedly more freedom in this century, it may be argued that it will be difficult to unite various religions under this new head; but such unity, I believe, can be accomplished on this basis—the love of God and service to one's fellow-man. There are already many signs of extensive co-operation—democracy, individualism, idealism, a tendency to welcome the new, and preventive medicine. Finally, I believe, the new religion will make Christ's revelation seem more wonderful than ever to us."

WANTS WOMEN ON POLICE.

Dr. Anna Shaw Says That the Criminal Needs Mothering.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 22.—That Minneapolis needs 100 women police is the opinion of Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, President of the National Woman's Suffrage Association, who to-day addressed the students in the chapel of the University of Minnesota.

She gave it as her opinion that should the demands of the suffragists be granted it would not be too much to expect that women should do their share in the Police and Fire Departments.

"One hundred women specialists put on the police force of any city would make for improved civic conditions," said Dr. Shaw. "The criminal needs 'mothering.' If women were on the police force their watchfulness, care, and attention to people who need their wholesome influence, backed up by authority, would prove a most useful and uplifting measure."

DIVORCES PHILIP V. MIGHELS.

Wife Alleged That Novelist Deserted Her in California.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 22.—Mrs. Ella Sterling Mighels got a divorce today from Philip Verrill Mighels, a novelist of New York, for desertion. Mrs. Mighels testified that her husband had bought a suburban place at Haywards, across the bay from San Francisco, several years ago, and induced her to go there to live in order that her health might be restored through simple living. He agreed to live there with her, she says, but instead returned to New York, and wrote that he would never return to live with her. She went to New York and appealed to him not to abandon her, she says, without result. Mrs. Virginia R. Dingee testified for Mrs. Mighels.

A novel by Mrs. Mighels, "The Full Glory of Diantha," was recently published.

ROCKEFELLER STILL GIVING.

Transfers House at 5 West 53d Street to Daughter, Mrs. Prentice.

John D. Rockefeller transferred yesterday another valuable piece of his property in this city, following several transfers earlier in the week, by conveying to his daughter, Mrs. E. Parmalee Prentice, title to the four-story residence at 5 West Fifty-third Street. It is a few doors west of St. Thomas's Church and directly in the rear of Mr. Rockefeller's residence in Fifty-fourth Street.

The house has been owned by Mr. Rockefeller since 1901 and has been occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Prentice for several years.

SPIES ON BRITISH WARSHIP?

Two Men Arrested, One with a Camera, on the Bellerophon.

PORTSMOUTH, England, July 22.—The Evening News says that two alleged foreign spies have been arrested on board the battleship Bellerophon, anchored off Southend.

The men, one of whom was carrying a camera, were acting suspiciously while being shown about the vessel during the pageant.

DISLIKES EXCURSIONISTS.

Newport Objects When 'Bus Drivers Expound Family History to Them.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I, July 22.—Many members of the cottage colony are displeased over the resumption of the Boston excursions, although the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad will send but three excursions this Summer, two in August, and one in September.

The 'bus drivers are in part responsible for the strong dislike to excursionists. In the past they have halted their 'busses filled with excursionists before Summer homes and have related family histories with a dash of imagination. An effort will be made to prevent a repetition of such incidents.

LOST $50,000 AT CARDS.

Wealthy Man One Victim of Alleged Professional American Gamblers.

PARIS, July 22.—An alleged band of American professional gamblers, giving the names of Osborne, Brody, Royal, and Hubbard have been arrested on the charge of card swindling on a huge scale. American and English guests at the fashionable hotels at Vichy, Aix-les-Bains, and other watering places were the victims. Quantities of marked cards and apparatus for sensitizing the fingers were found in their possession.

Posing as strangers one to the other, it is asserted, the men would start a game of poker or bridge, finishing big winners. The principal victims were rich Americans, from one of whom, the police say, $50,000 was taken at Aix-les-Bains.

It is believed that the names given by the men are false, and an investigation as to their identity is now going on.

TELEPHONE CO. ABSORBED.

American Telephone and Telegraph Takes Over Central District.

PITTSBURG, Penn., July 22.—The Central District and Printing Telegraph Company, which operates all the Bell lines in Western Pennsylvania, Eastern Ohio, and a part of West Virginia, was to-day taken over by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. The deal involves about $13,000,000. The stock of the former company gained 6½ points on the Pittsburg Stock Exchange, closing at 127, on the news of the deal, which was brought about by the acceptance of the proposal of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company to exchange its stock for the stock of the Central District and Printing Telegraph Company on the basis of one share of the former for one and one-half shares of the latter.

Much of the stock of the Central District and Printing Telegraph Company has been delivered to the Treasurer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company at 14 Dey Street, New York, and all of it will be in his hands by Aug. 31.

LIVED IN LUXURY BY FRAUD.

Von Scheliha Sentenced After Getting Many Thousands on Bogus Checks.

POSEN, Germany, July 22.—Joachim von Scheliha, who is said to be one of the most adventurous of criminals, and who has lived for years in the utmost luxury by fraud, was sentenced to-day by court-martial to eight months' imprisonment for desertion from the army, fraud, and embezzlement.

Von Scheliha, after he deserted, proceeded to the United States to join his father, who resides there. On his return here he lived under the names of Ferguson, Stanley, and various aliases, and gave it out that he was a millionaire.

According to the police he circulated bogus checks to the amount of hundreds of thousands of dollars, but he always gained high esteem because he never failed to donate a large sum to the poor in every city where he stopped.

Eventually he was arrested in Paris while carrying out a fraudulent scheme and served four years in jail. He was then extradited to Switzerland, where he was imprisoned for a year. On being extradited to Germany he fell into the hands of the military authorities.

BRUNO HOBBS DROWNS IN LAKE GEORGE

International Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Upset in a Canoe in Silver Bay.

RESCUED, BUT TOO LATE

He Couldn't Swim and Was Warned of the Risk of Paddling in a Breeze, but Would Take It.

Special to The New York Times.

SILVER BAY, Lake George, July 22.—Bruno Hobbs, Field Secretary of the International Young Men's Christian Association, was drowned here late this afternoon while taking a cruise in his canoe.

Mr. Hobbs lived at 405 West 118th Street, New York. A camp meeting is in progress at Silver Bay, and he came here several days ago to attend it. He had a tent in the camp near the Silver Bay Hotel in a patch of woods.

Being fond of the water, Mr. Hobbs had been going out every day in a rowboat. This afternoon he expressed a desire to try a canoe belonging to one of the members of the camp meeting. He had reached middle age without having learned to swim, and he was warned of the danger of so uncertain a craft capsizing.

"I'm not afraid," said Mr. Hobbs. "I can manage it, I guess."

There was a slight ruffle on the lake when he went out. He paddled the canoe directly out toward the middle of the bay. He had not gone very far when the breeze became a brisk wind. Mr. Hobbs, turning the canoe around, started back for shore. As he paddled along, a score of members of the camp meeting sat on the bank and watched him.

Mr. Hobbs waved to them as though to indicate that he was in no fear. Suddenly a stiff gust of wind caught the canoe. It turned half way about, then, with a lurch, capsized. Mr. Hobbs let out a cry as he plunged into the water.

Immediately, half a dozen men who had been watching him, put out in boats. The watchers on shore saw Mr. Hobbs floundering about in the water. He sank twice before the boats reached him. Just as he was going under for the third time one of the men seized him by the collar of his soft shirt.

Mr. Hobbs was pulled into the boat and rushed ashore, as past as the rowers could go, but he was unconscious by the time he reached there. Heroic efforts at resuscitation were employed. A physician, who had been at the camp and had started away just before Mr. Hobbs went out in the canoe, was found at the Silver Bay Hotel, and hastened to Mr. Hobbs's aid. He caused Mr. Hobbs to be rolled over a barrel and used other methods in an effort to save the man's life, but to no purpose.

The drowned man's body was taken back to the camp and word was sent to his friends in New York.

Bruno Hobbs, who was known throughout the world wherever the Young Men's Christian Association is in action, was 45 years old. He came from Denver and was a graduate of the Kansas State University.

After leaving the university, Mr. Hobbs became a lawyer, but his interest in Y. M. C. A. work led to his being made successively Chairman of the Y. M. C. A. State Committees in Colorado and Kansas, to which State he subsequently moved.

Three years ago Mr. Hobbs became Field Secretary of the International Y. M. C. A. organization, and moved with his wife and child to New York.

The camp meetings at Silver Bay have been held each year since 1906, and Mr. Hobbs had attended all of them. He was an ardent worker, and led many of the religious meetings at these gatherings.

CONEY CROWD IN CAR PANIC.

Two Women Hurt in Jumping When the Fuse Blew Out.

Two women were seriously injured and many others shaken up when a fuse blew out in a Vanderbilt Avenue, Brooklyn, trolley car at Gravesend and Fort Hamilton Avenues early this morning. The car, filled with passengers, mostly women and children, was returning from Coney Island. The passengers fought to get off.

It was going at a high rate of speed and several passengers jumped. Among them were Mrs. Mary McLaughlin, 61 years old, of 157 Garfield Place, Brooklyn, and Miss Evelyn Fulton, 28 years old, of 81 Thomas Street, Newark, N. J. Mrs. McLaughlin landed on the cobblestones and received a fractured skull. Miss Fulton had her right arm and left leg broken.

Dr. Gissel responded to a call from Seney Hospital and was kept busy for half an hour dressing the wounds of the injured. Several of the women and children had fainted, and many others were cut and bruised. Mrs. McLaughlin and Miss Fulton were taken to the hospital, where, it was said, the former was in a serious condition.

A wrecking car was hurried to the scene, and when it approached Gravesend Avenue it bumped into a flat car which had run up close to the wrecked one. The flat car, in turn, bumped into the passenger car, and for the second time the passengers were shaken up.

James Ashley, the motorman of the flat car, was thrown over the front of the car and bruised. Traffic on the line was tied up for over an hour.

INVENTOR DIES IN WANT.

Kimball Said to Have Given All His Property to His Wife.

Frederick A. Kimball, a middle-aged man, died suddenly yesterday afternoon of heart disease at 19 East Fourteenth Street. According to his friends he had been until a few months ago an inventor and a manufacturer of electrical belts and other appliances for the cure of rheumatism. He signed over his business, however, and all he possessed to his wife. It is alleged that they had not lived together of late, and that Kimball was in reduced circumstances.

Kimball's friends are wondering on whom will fall the expense of burying him. His body was removed to an undertaking establishment.

TARIFF PROPHETS ARE ALL AT ODDS

Only Certainty in Much Guesswork Is That President's Demands Have Not Changed.

SAID ALDRICH BLOCKS WAY

Charged with Breaking Faith with Taft—Cummins Attacks Free Raw Material Idea and Iron Schedule.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—President Taft is standing like a rock for the enactment of the full measure of his demands for free raw material and reductions on other schedules of the tariff. He has been beaten on most of the reductions and will get little or nothing of his demands. That is exactly the attitude of the President, according to the most veracious, if somewhat various, accounts obtainable to-night.

The conferrees are proceeding with the utmost amicability with their task, and are about to agree on all points. They have struck half a dozen insurmountable obstacles and will not be able to render a report for at least a week yet. They have practically surrendered to Mr. Taft on all his demands. They are agreed in resisting them all. The House has won on most of its demands. The rates so far agreed upon are those of the Senate. This is the exact situation regarding the conference, according to accounts equally various.

In short, persons who have talked with President Taft to-day, or with those who did talk with him, are unanimous in feeling strongly encouraged. The President's optimism is easily transferred to his callers. Persons who have talked either with conferrees or with those who have been in conversation with the tariff arbiters are apt to say that the situation is all in air; that there is little present prospect of an early settlement, and that when the agreement does come it will be practically a defeat for the President.

Out of all this conflict of information one thing is certain, that the President has not changed his position or his demands in the least, and is still working to get what he wants. There may be some ground for the report that his work is not quite as effective as it was at the start, and it may be that the opponents of the President in both Senate and House, who are talking so vigorously to-day, are really in the last ditch, and are doing the loudest talking just before they conclude to yield.

Say Aldrich Blocks Way.

Senator Crane, the Republican whip of the Senate, is still confident that hides will go on the free list, and that there will be an accompanying reduction in leather and its manufactures. Another Senator declared with emphasis that Senator Aldrich was blocking the way. This involves Aldrich in a charge of bad faith toward the President, who has had the assurance of Aldrich that if the bill could once be passed by the Senate, it could and would be shaped up in conference so that it would suit Mr. Taft. President Taft stood for the stiff rates that Aldrich was putting into the Senate bill in the belief that they would be cut down in conference. But it now appears that as soon as the bill went into conference, Aldrich found that the combination he had been obliged to make to get it through the Senate was so strong that he did not want to undertake to break it, and so went to the President and said that it would have to be Mr. Taft who would have to do the breaking. When the President set out to smash the combination by his demand for some free raw materials, he found Aldrich's influence in the way.

It was said to-night that there are only seven or eight items still under discussion, but the chief of these are the most controversial items of the whole bill—hides and their products, oil and its products, iron ore, coal, lumber, cotton, including hosiery and gloves. There was pretty straight information to-night that the House conferees were showing a disposition to accept the Senate rates on cotton with a few exceptions. The general conference adjourned early to-day in order to give the House conferees opportunity to hear some expert testimony as to the Senate schedule. They heard the two appraisers who practically wrote the Senate schedule, and were much impressed by the testimony, largely upon the old pretext that served so well in the Senate that the increases were really only a restoration to the rates intended to be provided by the Dingley law before they were emasculated by court decisions.

It developed, too, that some definite information was conveyed to the President at the White House dinner by the conferrees. He was told, for instance, that out of about 400 items already agreed upon in conference 336 were positive reductions, and that the others did not include many increases.

It was pointed out at the White House this morning that the President, in standing for free coal, hides, iron ore, and oil was not committed to the doctrine of free raw materials as such. He is not going into a contest to secure the free listing of other raw materials, and it is not necessarily because hides, ore, coal, and oil are raw materials that he demands that they go on the free list. It is because he believes they ought to be free, just as he believes there should be substantial reductions on the manufactures of leather.

Customs Court in Washington.

In two respects, at least, the dinner conference bore direct fruit this morning. The location of the Customs Court and the details of the corporation tax were discussed at length last night, and to-day the Conference Committee acted. It was definitely decided that the court should sit in Washington instead of in New York, and the proposition to make the term of the corporation tax indefinite was also agreed to.

The location of the Customs Court in New York City had aroused opposition from the start, and there was feeling on the part of the revisionists that having it located there, where the influence of the General Appraisers has established a sort of traditional hostility to low rates of duty, would be tantamount to underscoring every high rate in the pending Tariff bill and diminishing measurably what downward revision the bill may contain.

It was learned authoritatively to-day that the little "tariff commission" provision which had been put into the Senate bill as a sop to Senator Beveridge has been still further weakened by the conference. Where the original draft authorized the giving of information to the President and Congress, this information will now be consigned exclusively to the President.

The Speaker is said to have told the President, with his customary vigor of speech, that he didn't want "any free-trade college professors" to be sending information to Congress. The President feels satisfied, as he will simply forward to Congress such parts of the information he receives as he considers important. But the revisionists in both houses feel they have been misled again.

Shortly after the adjournment of the conference this morning Mr. Aldrich and Mr. Payne were invited to dine at the White House this evening in company with Representative McCall, a moderate revisionists of the Conference Committee. None of the statesmen would discuss their talk with the President when they left the White House. Speaker Cannon walked to the White House gate with Mr. McCall and remained talking earnestly with the Massachusetts representative for a long time.

The conferrees to-night assert that everything is now disposed of except the few big items that have always been excepted. Some expect a report not later than Saturday night, and the general impression is that the report will certainly be made by Monday evening. After that plain sailing is expected. A Senate conferree this afternoon thought that the end of next week would certainly see the document signed.

It was definitely denied to-day that Chairman Payne had threatened his own followers with a move to recommit the bill coupled with a demand for a new set of conferees unless they supported him in his fight for the free raw materials, and it is now practically admitted that the high Senate rates on lumber will prevail. H. E. Defebaugh of Chicago, the big Western lumber man, has been in touch with the situation here in Washington for many days, and when he left for Chicago this afternoon he announced that he has been assured of the $1.50 duty.

Mr. Cummins's Statement.

The situation as viewed by the insurgents is summed up in a statement issued by Senator Cummins to-night. Though he expressly stated that he was not speaking for his colleagues, his views coincide very closely with those of the other revisionists. Mr. Cummins breakfasted with the President this morning, and his statement is taken as an interpretation of the situation in the light of the President's utterance.

The Senator declared that free raw materials will bring little advantage to the people if they are unaccompanied by reductions in the duties on manufactured products. Such reductions on materials, he says, would merely result in increasing the measure of protection to the manufacturer.

The iron and steel schedule, he insists, is much too high. The schedule, however, might be accepted were it not for one increase which he thinks will do more evil than can be repaired by all the decreases.

"Structural iron and steel," he says, "the use of which is so rapidly increasing, is raised from the Dingley rate of $10 per ton and the House rate of $6 per ton to 45 per cent. ad valorem, which at the present price of this commodity, means a duty of $16 a ton, an increase over the present law of $6 per ton, and over the House provision of $10 per ton. When it is considered that the duty on steel rails is $3.50 per ton and their market price is $28 per ton, the proposed duty upon a form of steel which sells for $35 per ton is wholly indefensible.

"It would be vastly better, if a fair rate can be secured on but one item, to allow the duty on iron ore to go at 25 cents per ton, and cut the duty on structural steel to $5 or $6 per ton, where it properly belongs, and where it would still furnish complete protection to home producers, measured by the Republican standard."

JEFFRIES MEETS GOV. JOHNSON

Pugilist Warned He Cannot Fight in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 22.—James J. Jeffries and his sparring partner, Sam Berger, called on Gov. Johnson to-day at the Capitol and were received cordially. The big fighter told the Governor that he was ready at any time now to defend his title as champion.

"You look fit to go in right now and kill almost anybody, I should say," remarked Gov. Johnson, as he took in the square-built form of the pugilist.

"You look like a man who could take care of himself all right," said Berger to the Governor.

"I should think I could," the Governor rejoined, laughing. "I would be willing to put up $1,000,000 on the table here and go into the next room with Mr. Jeffries, and let the one who comes out have the $1,000,000."

Jeffries laughed. "You might argue me out of it," he said.

The Governor asked Jeffries his age and weight. Jeffries said he weighed 235 now and had fought before at about 215, but weight did not bother him at all, and he was in fine shape.

"You are going to defend your title then?" said Frank A. Day, the Governor's private secretary.

"Oh, yes," Jeffries replied. "I am going to fight again. I was glad to get out of the ring and did not want to get back, but I am back now and will fight Johnson."

One of the party suggested that the Jeffries-Johnson fight ought to come off in Minneapolis. Gov. Johnson laughed and said: "No, I'll have to draw the line there. You can't fight in Minnesota."

TALE OF A $70,000 GIFT.

Servant Says Dead Mistress Gave It and Said "God Bless You."

CHICAGO, July 22.—Edward Morrison sought to find out in the Probate Court what had become of $79,000 worth of bonds and stocks which his wife, Balbena Morrison, had just before she died last May. Mrs. Kate Hiller, the daughter of an elevated conductor and her crippled brother, Carl Hauber, were called upon to explain. Mrs. Hiller and her husband were arrested in Hoboken, N. J., on June 17, just as they were about to board a liner for Europe. This is Mrs. Hiller's story:

"I knew Mrs. Morrison for nine years. I was called to her home to act as housekeeper for ten months. I left there in April. I first met her when she came to buy some lace I had made. She took an interest in my crippled brother, and bought some paper flowers which he made.

"On July 4, 1908, she called me to a couch in her room.

"'Dear, I have something for you,' she said.

"Then she went to a closet off the dining room and brought out a tin box. She opened it and handed me one package, telling me that it held $70,000 in money, which was for myself. Then she took another package containing bonds valued at $79,000, which she said I should give to my brother. She said:

"'Here, my child, take this and keep it. Do with it as you wish, and may God bless you and make you rich. I hope that you have much luck.'

"I took the money; invested it, but I put the bonds back under the bed, because I thought Mrs. Morrison had a sister who might need them."

This story was corroborated by Mrs. Matilda Plum, sister of Mrs. Hiller. The bonds have not been found.

Mrs. Morrison was 66 years old at the time this gift is said to have been made. The pending case will not be disposed of until Aug. 25.

BIG GANG INVOLVED IN CUSTOMS SWINDLE

Loeb's Men Expect to Make More Arrests Soon—They Locate the "Fence."

TWO IMPORTANT ARRESTS

Officers Held Up Go-Between with a Revolver While Subduing His Accomplice in a Lively Street Fight.

Three of the four men arrested for complicity in the plot by which hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of imported goods have been stolen while in transit from steamship piers to the Public Stores at Christopher and Washington Streets, were held yesterday by Commissioner Shields for examination on Monday.

William Corbin, the driver, who came under suspicion during the investigation, was released on his promise to come to the United States District Attorney's office if wanted.

With the arraignment of the men, more interesting facts in connection with the case came out. The arrests made on Wednesday, it is now said, are likely to be only the first of a series, for the Department of Justice men who, under the direction of J. E. Loud of the Law Division of the Custom House, have spent weeks of patient watching on the case, are convinced that many were implicated in the plot. Not only have they located the "fence," but they have found also that the men had confederates on the ferryboats.

It was brought out that the capture of Walter Bruce, the alleged go between, and Nicholas Griffin, the driver of the truck containing the stolen goods, was effected only after a fight in the street in which the Government officials had to use clubs and a pistol.

Mr. Loud, George M. Kennoch, and George Dyer followed the truck from the ferryboat until it was approaching the fence's place in Little West Twelfth Street, which they had already located. They ran ahead and took up a position where they could see and hear when the truck drove up.

Griffin began to carry in the stolen cheviot while Bruce stood in the truck and assisted in the unloading.

Griffin had taken one bale into the house and was going back with the second bale when two of the officers stepped up and arrested him. At that he dropped his load and started in to fight. At his first shout Bruce started to climb down from the wagon.

"You stay where you are," said one of the Government men, and Bruce found himself looking into the muzzle of a revolver.

In the meantime Griffin was fighting desperately to get away. One of the officers pulled a blackjack and made him surrender. Before he was subdued, however, Griffin had to be knocked down. The fight caused considerable excitement in the neighborhood and a crowd gathered. The man with the revolver explained that Government officers were making an arrest and this announcement and the sight of the revolver prevented interference.

John Miller, the truckman who took the goods from the Hoboken pier, was arrested later.

The credit for the arrests is said to be largely due to the efforts of Mr. Loud, who was first assigned to the case, and who worked for two weeks perfecting plans before calling in assistance.

The number of searchers has now been increased by men from the Federal District Attorney's office. The deckhands on some ferryboats are now under suspicion, it is said, of having "stood in" with the thieves. In one case, at least, it has been discovered that where a case was broken open on a ferryboat the thieves found the goods were not worth the risk of stealing or returning to the looted consignment, and so the stuff was burned in the engine room.

Collector Loeb issued yesterday this statement regarding the arrests:

"The Collector has been working at this problem since he took office. He has been aided by the co-operation of the Merchants' Association acting on behalf of the importers. The system employed was for drivers of trucks to pick up a confederate as the truck went on the ferryboat, and when the boat was crossing the river, to have the confederate break open such cases as the driver pointed out, and then have the confederate put the stolen goods on a truck of an accomplice, who would take the goods to a 'fence.'

"For weeks the agents of the Collector have been watching various ferryboats, with the result that the men were caught red-handed."

LOEB WATCHING TUGBOATS.

Collector Trying to Compel Harbor Craft to Keep Logs.

Collector Loeb and the Supervising Inspector of Steamboats are trying to devise a plan to compel the skippers of tugs and harbor craft of over fifty gross tons to keep a log recording their comings and goings. The log is made necessary as a record of the length of tour of duty such boats are doing, for it is by this time record that the size of the crew is governed.

The steamboat inspection laws say that a vessel subject to the law "shall not be navigated unless she shall have in her service and on board such complement of licensed officers and crew as may, in the judgment of the local Inspectors, be necessary for her safe navigation."

The officials decided that certificates for small craft should have written on them the stipulation that if they did not operate more than thirteen hours a day only a single crew was necessary. If they worked a longer time, the law required a second crew to relieve the first. The law was all right on the statute books, but how to enforce it the Inspectors did not know. There were many conferences on the subject, and some months ago the board adopted a rule making it obligatory for the pilot and the Chief Engineer each to keep a log giving the times of arrivals and departures of their vessel.

This rule has brought some of the tugboat men into almost open revolt against the Steamboat Inspectors. The failure to keep a log brings a fine of $500, and the same amount can be levied for a doctored log. Owners who have not been obeying the rule have apparently lost sight of the fact that every man in their employ is practically a detective for the Government, since all want the regulations followed that insure only thirteen hours of duty in each twenty-four hours. Complaints, therefore, are coming in fast to Capt. Ira Harris, head of the Steamboat Inspection Service, and each day sees some tug skipper and engineer appearing in the office at the Custom House for investigation.

FIVE SHOT IN STRIKE.

State Troops Ready to Quell Rioting at Wisconsin Tannery.

KENOSHA, Wis., July 22.—State troops at Milwaukee are in readiness to-night to proceed at once to this city in the event of any recurrence of the rioting, which broke out here to-day, when the N. R. Allen Sons' Company reopened its tannery plant, the employes of which had been on strike.

The rioting to-day began when the guards attempted to disperse strikers who gathered in numbers about the plant to jeer at 200 men who remained at work. As the last of the men entered a rush was made by those outside to get into the building. Simultaneously a deputy and a policeman were cut off by the strikers and attacked with bricks and clubs.

The guards drew their revolvers and charged the mob, firing in the air. When the strikers retreated one of their number was found to have been shot in the groin. He is believed to be fatally injured. Deputy Sheriff Lewis Morehouse and Policeman Nelson, on whom the attack was made, were both painfully injured about the head.

The shooting squelched hostilities, but a few minutes later a riot occurred on the street. The police had made an arrest and were about to put their man in a patrol wagon when the strikers attacked them. In the fight that followed two strikers were shot through the legs.

To-day's disturbance interrupted a conference in which negotiations for settlement of the strike were in progress between Charles W. Allen, General Manager of the company, and a deputation of strikers. An agreement was reached late this afternoon, however, for a further conference to-morrow.

The strike was the outgrowth of demands made yesterday for the removal of an objectionable foreman and an increase of 50 cents a week in pay. Both of these concessions, the tannery officials say, were agreed to, whereupon a new demand for $1 a week increase was made. This was refused.

KUHNE FREE; SUSPENDED.

Acting Captain Jailed for Contempt Must Face a Police Trial.

Acting Captain August Kuhne, former head of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, was released from the Raymond Street Jail yesterday morning, after serving thirty days for contempt of court in connection with taking a picture of Banker Frank Jenkins for the Rogues' Gallery. He went directly to Mulberry Street and reported to Inspector McCafferty, who relieved the Acting Captain of his badge and told him he was suspended without pay and would have to face charges "for conduct unbecoming an officer."

Kuhne didn't appear to have suffered greatly from his confinement. He said he would go right over to his home, where his three children have been ill for some time. Commissioner Baker refused to tell the nature of the charge to be made against Kuhne.

"Canon Chase was allowed to apologize when adjudged in contempt," said Kuhne. "Why was not the same opportunity afforded me? I am only a policeman and I simply acted according to department rules. I enjoyed my stay in jail, the only trouble being having to hang around doing nothing."

It is said that if Kuhne weathers his trial without being put out of the department he will probably be sent to some outlying precinct.

BREWER SAYS JUDGES CAUSE LAW'S DELAYS

our jurisdiction. We owe them a responsibility which we cannot dodge as honest men. We must do the best we can to elevate them to a higher condition of life and make them fit for citizenship. The consent of the governed has to remain in abeyance.

Votes for Women Pressing Question.

"Then there is the suffrage question. There are a good many of the gentler sex that think they know as much as we do and are just as well qualified to cast a vote as we are. They are busy endeavoring to bring about the result, and they have secured it in four States. There are a good many questions to be considered in reference to it, but at the same time it cannot be ignored. And there never is going to be a danger of their pressing the question as those suffragettes did in England with hatpins. They are appealing to our intelligence and mean to convince us if possible that the best interests of the Nation require that they shall be permitted to vote. That question is coming before us. Every State will have to meet it. The Nation will have to meet it. It canont be put to one side. It is a question calling for intelligent consideration of the interests of the Nation as a whole.

"If it is for the interests of the gentler sex that they vote, then it is for the interest of the Nation that they should vote. If it is for their interests that they should not vote, then it is for the interest of the Nation that they should not. There is no division between the interests of men and women in this respect. Whatever is pleasing to one pleases the other, and whatever hurts the one hurts the other."

BROWN ANSWERS BREWER.

Characterizes as "Absurd and Senile" Statement Attributed to Justice.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Characterizing as "utterly ridiculous, absurd, and senile," the statement accredited to Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court of the United States in his Milwaukee speech to the effect that under a National income tax law States would be "taxed not only out of their existence, but out of their vitality," Senator Brown of Nebraska, author of the first resolution to refer the question to State Legislatures, to-day said:

"I cannot believe that the report contained in the morning papers is correct. It puts Justice Brewer in the position of contending that if the Federal Government has the power to tax incomes, such power will be taken away from the States. In no way, under no circumstances, would the proposed amendment to the Constitution give the Federal Government power to tax any State out of either existence or vitality. The tax would be laid under the proposed amendment on the incomes of the citizens of all States for Federal purposes alone, and the amendment would in no way withdraw from the States the power they already have to tax incomes for State and municipal purposes."

"In my judgment every State in the Union will ratify the amendment at its first opportunity," continued Mr. Brown. "The present agitation all over the country, looking to the calling of special sessions of the Legislatures for the purpose of ratifying the amendment is conclusive evidence that the public minds are aroused upon the question and determined that Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on incomes."

THE SPECIAL PROBLEM

One of our common experiences is to have a business man come to us with a problem in some department of his business which is representing a daily loss, which is taking an undue amount of his personal attention, and for which, nevertheless, he is able to find no effective solution.

Almost invariably, in such cases, we find the trouble to be due, not to any inherent difficulty in the situation, but to the violation of some fundamental principle of organization. Correct the underlying condition, and the whole problem immediately simplifies itself into a mere matter of routine.

An interview with us involves no obligation.

MOTOR CYCLE RUNS HEAD ON INTO AUTO

Chauffeur's Head Jammed Into a Bank and Cyclist Is Severely Injured.

CAR GOES INTO THE DITCH

Driver Risks His Life in a Desperate Effort to Avoid the Collision.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., July 22.—While striving to avoid running down a motorcyclist on the road between this place and Roslyn last evening, Oscar Cornelius, employed by Charles H. Hyde, a Summer resident of Port Washington, was pitched from the car and his head buried in a nearby bank. He was badly injured as was also the motorcyclist.

Cornelius was on the way to the railroad station to meet his employer, when, at a sharp turn that is rendered worse by a high bank on one side, he encountered Jacob Nielson of Roslyn, proprietor of a bicycle store. Nielson was riding a motorcycle rapidly. Neither saw the other until they were within ten or fifteen feet of each other. It was useless to attempt to shut off power and stop the machines.

Nielson considered, in the flash of time, he had for thought, that to turn out in either direction would mean certain death, and that his only chance lay in keeping straight ahead. He believed he would be shot into the automobile by the impact.

Cornelius, however, did not want the responsibility of running down the motorcyclist, and so he turned the automobile into the bank. It did not avert the impending collision, but proved that he had done what he could, at the risk of his own life, to avert it. As Cornelius was shot into the bank, Nielson was thrown, suffering a compound fracture of the leg and several fractured ribs.

Nielson was taken to the Nassau Hospital in Mineola by Mr. Hyde, who had hired a rig at the station when he found his automobile had not arrived. The automobile was badly damaged, and the motorcycle was smashed beyond repair.

MOTORIST HELD FOR KILLING.

Police Now Trailing the Chauffeur Who Ran Down Motorman Finn.

J. Cleveland Collins, a youth of 149th Street and Bradhurst Avenue, Bronx, was arrested yesterday and turned over to the Yonkers police, who wanted him in connection with the killing of James Finn, a motorman, who was struck by a racing automobile in Jerome Avenue, at the city line, early on Wednesday morning.

Yonkers detectives, after the accident, went to the home of James Plunkitt, the chauffeur of the auto racer, at 2,579 Eighth Avenue, this city. Plunkitt's aunt told them that the chauffeur and Collins had called at the house at 7:30 o'clock, only a short time after Finn was killed.

Plunkitt packed his clothes in a suitcase, after telling his aunt what had happened, and said he was going away. The detectives learned from the woman where Collins lived, and they set a watch over the house. Collins did not return there until after midnight, when he was arrested.

Collins, after being taken to Yonkers, told the police that he and Plunkitt took the auto out of the garage of Edward Kertschner of 181st Street, the Bronx, at 10 P. M. Tuesday, intending to take a half hour's spin. They were at the Yonkers line, he said, before they knew it. In the road they saw a man standing. Plunkitt tried to steer out, Collins said, but the man, who proved to be Finn, jumped directly in the way of the auto. The machine bowled him down and ran into a ditch.

After the accident, Collins said, he and Plunkitt came back to the city, where the chauffeur later in the day went to a bank and drew out $100. Together they went to New Haven. Collins remained there until late in the day, when he decided to return home. He left Plunkitt in New Haven, and detectives have gone after him.

CHAUFFEUR CHASES ANOTHER.

Taxicab Driver Catches Man Who Ran Down Mr. and Mrs. Goldfarb.

Hermann Goldfarb, a milliner, of 583 Broome Street, who lives at the Manhassett Apartment, 109th Street and Broadway, was walking with his wife at 12:30 o'clock this morning, when they were run down by a taxicab belonging to the New York Taxicab Company, driven by Joseph Neary, at Eighty-second Street and Broadway.

The cab did not stop after knocking down Mr. and Mrs. Goldfarb, but sped on up Broadway.

Joseph Lebost, driver of an independent taxicab, saw the accident and gave chase to the red taxicab. He was urged on by two women passengers in his cab, who said that they would pay the extra time. Lebost ran the other auto onto the sidewalk at Eighty-sixth Street and Broadway, where Policeman Grossman of the West 100th Street Police Station arrested Neary and took him to the station. There were two men in the cab.

One escaped and the other refused to give his name. He was held as a witness. At the J. Hood Wright Hospital, where Mr. and Mrs. Goldford were taken, the surgeons said that they had both received scalp wounds, contusions of the body, and probably internal injuries.

RUN DOWN BY AN AUTO, DYING.

Engineer Found Senseless in the Road at Ridgewood.

The police of Queens are searching for the automobile which some time on Wednesday night struck and fatally injured John Flynn, an engineer, residing at 410 Warren Street, Brooklyn. Flynn is now in St. Catherine's Hospital, Brooklyn, suffering from what is believed to be a fracture of the skull and internal injuries. It is said he is in a dying condition.

Flynn was found lying unconscious on Metropolitan Avenue, near Newtown Creek, Ridgewood, early yesterday morning. On the way to the hospital he revived long enough to say that an automobile had struck him and knocked him down and then hurried away. He was not able to give a description of the machine or its occupants before he again lapsed into unconsciousness.

The incorporating Directors are Mathew J. Gonnoud, 1,595 Lexington Avenue; Frederick Walter, 1,600 Lexington Avenue, and Isidor Klatzke, 133 East 104th Street.

TRUNK MURDER MYSTERY.

Nalbandian, in Whose Room Body Was Found, Has Disappeared.

LYNN, Mass., July 22.—Another trunk murder mystery was added to criminal annals to-day when the body of Minos K. Monjian, an Armenian shoe worker, was found in a room of a boarding house at 148 Liberty Street by the landlady, Mrs. Bessie Robbins. The room was that of Nahan Nalbandian. There was a bullet wound through the breast, with several knife wounds near it. The body had been placed in the trunk fully clothed. It was probably placed there late Saturday night or early Sunday morning, for Monjian was seen by his sister in Boston on Saturday afternoon.

The motive for the murder is not known. It was not robbery, for the man's bankbook, his gold watch and chain, and some loose change were found in his pockets. The police say that since Monjian's return from a trip to Chicago about two weeks ago he had earned but $15, and had probably spent nearly all of that.

The police are anxious to find Vahan Nalbandian, in whose room Monjian's body was found. He was an associate of Monjian, and, like him, a shoe worker. Nalbandian has been missing since Monday. This man is also known as Frank Jones, and the police of all the large cities in the country have been asked to be on the lookout for him. In Worcester an especially careful search will be made through the Armenian quarter for Nalbandian, as it is believed he once lived in that city.

Former associates of Nalbandian say they have not seen him in Lynn for several days, and that he said then he was going to Turkey.

Chief of Police Burckes says he is satisfied that the murderer and Monjian went together to Nalbandian's room at 148 Liberty Street, either late Saturday night or early Sunday morning. It is the opinion of Chief Burckes also that the trunk was purchased for the purpose it was made to serve, and that Monjian walked into a trap that had been carefully prepared for him. The Chief does not attempt, however, to explain the motive for the crime.

Monjian and Nalbandian had known each other for over two years. They had worked together as vampers in several Lynn shoe factories, and continued friendly when Nalbandian gave up his position as a shoe worker to become a speculator in a small way in the stock market.

At the local coffee houses Nalbandian is reported to have commented freely upon his stock operations, saying he had been successful, but some Armenians say that on the contrary Nalbandian had lost all of his money and was seeking a way to recoup. The police say that they know of a bank in Boston where Nalbandian secured over $200 which was on deposit in his name within a few days.

SUICIDE'S TRUST HELD VALID.

Supreme Court Directs That Charles L. Spier's Wishes Be Carried Out.

Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum gave his decision yesterday in the suit brought by Louis Adler, as substitute trustee for the late Alfred Lauterbach against Edwin Shattuck, as receiver of the New York Investment and Improvement Company, and other creditors of Charles L. Spier, former President of the company, who committed suicide at his home in Staten Island in May, 1906. The action was brought to obtain judicial instruction as to the disposal of $75,000 worth of life insurance Spier had taken out two days before he killed himself.

Spier had forged the name of Lauterbach, as Treasurer of the New York Investment and Improvement Company, to several checks, and after taking out the policies Spier carried them to him and directed that in case anything happened to him $66,067 of the proceeds should go to the company to discharge his indebtedness, $2,500 should be paid to Eugene Howell, Secretary of the company, and $4,432 to his wife.

Justice Greenbaum held that the directions as given by Spier constituted a valid trust, and directed that they be carried out.

BAN ON CHINATOWN TRIPS.

Six Companies Forbid Sightseeing by Tourists in San Francisco.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 22.—Tourists who come to San Francisco must forego the Chinatown slumming trips, heretofore one of the interesting episodes of a visit to the city. Before the fire and recently the regular Chinatown guides have piloted large parties of visitors through the Chinese quarters every night. They visited opium dens, gambling places, restaurants, Joss houses, and even homes, where they saw women with bandaged feet.

Now leaders of the Six Companies declare that this system of putting Chinatown on exhibition for tourists must stop, and the edict has gone forth that tourists shall not be admitted even to theatres and restaurants.

This is a heavy blow to the Chinatown guides, who have collected a fee of $2 each. The opium smokers, gamblers, blind paupers, singing children, and other curiosities were all hired.

JUMPS FROM FAST EXPRESS.

Girl Not Seriously Hurt, Though Train Was Running 25 Miles an Hour.

PORT JEFFERSON, L. I., July 22.—Dora Goldberg, the 14-year-old daughter of Benjamin Goldberg of Setauket, jumped from the rear platform of the Wading River Express to-day when the train was about a mile east of the Smithtown Station and traveling at a rate of twenty-five miles an hour.

The girl made a pretense of being thirsty and left her father to walk to the end of the car for a drink.

Several passengers saw her jump, and the train was stopped. Dr. Winfield of Shoreham resuscitated the girl, whom the shock of the fall had made senseless. The physician could find no broken bones, and said the girl was unhurt except for bruises and the shock.

Mr. Goldberg said he knew of no reason for the girl's act, and Miss Goldberg declined to say why she had jumped from the train.

LID ON TIGHT IN BROOKLYN.

Even Shuts Down on a Hard Cider Saloon, the Proprietor Protesting.

There was great excitement among the villagers over in Brooklyn yesterday when it became known that Police Commissioner Baker had made good his threat to put the lid on by raiding an alleged hard cider saloon in Court Street.

Late in the afternoon a force of police descended upon the cider saloon which is owned by Louis Vetter and is at 63 Court Street. They were acting on suspicion that hard cider was being sold in the place. One of them, disguised as a farm hand, had previously visited the saloon, and alleged that he had been served with a glass of apple juice which was "harder'n nails, by heck!" All the stock in the place was confiscated and taken to the Adams Street Station on a truck.

Vetter was indignant over the raid. He declared that all of his cider was as soft and sweet as a Coler sentiment about Metz. When the fellows hanging around got to twitting him he grew real reckless, and offered to give $100 to any one who could find a drop of hard cider in his casks.

The matter will come up in court on Aug. 6.

HO! FOR THE AIRSHIPS FROM EAST NEW YORK

Company Incorporated to Run 'em to Albany and Other Places When Completed.

GEORGE E. TINKER INVENTOR

Is Experimenting with Dirigibles in a Field, and the Whole Settlement Backs the Project.

Every time East New Yorkers read about the Wright brothers flying for an hour or so down at Fort Myer or of Latham almost crossing the English Channel, they dig each other in the ribs and chortle. Such puerile performances merely excite the mirth of East New Yorkers, because when it comes to the flying business they think that George E. Tinker has all the other aviators "backed over the horizon," as they express it.

While Latham is attempting to fly from Calais to Dover and Glenn Curtiss is pluming himself on circling over Hempsted Plains, East New York's Mr. Tinker is quietly preparing to operate an aerial transportation line between New York and Albany for both passengers and freight. If all goes well, New Yorkers may be able in the near future, as Mr. Tinker's friends put it, to take an air line express ship at the City Hall, soar above the highlands of the Hudson, and land at the State capital in a few hours.

Yesterday Inventor Tinker and the men associated with him in his enterprise had themselves incorporated at Albany as the New York Aerial Manufacturing and Navigation Company. Under this imposing name the East New Yorkers plan to manufacture airships and to operate lines of such craft between cities for transportation purposes.

The first transit route through the clouds will be between New York and Albany. If the airships do not display a disposition to seek the earth and the business pays, as Mr. Tinker's friends are all sure it will, by and by, other lines will probably be run between this city and Boston and Philadelphia.

Meantime East New York is suffering from a severe attack of flying fever. It takes big stock in Inventor Tinker and his inventions, and is backing up its faith with money. The $25,000 capital of the company has all been contributed by business men of the section. The incorporators include a plumber, a lawyer, a druggist, and a bicycle dealer. They all seem to have perfect confidence that Mr. Tinker's machines will do all that is promised for them, and that the aerial navigation business will make millionaires of them all.

Mr. Tinker, a modest, earnest man, lives and has a workshop at 1,080 Blake Avenue. There yesterday afternoon he exhibited a working model of one of his airships. He plans to manufacture a dirigible balloon of his own invention and also an aeroplane which he has invented.

For the proposed transportation line he will use dirigible balloons. His air craft of this class differs from most dirigibles in that it will not depend on a gas-filled bag to keep it in the air. The Tinker ship will have a silk gas bag within an aluminium shell, but will rely upon fast-revolving propellers to lift it and keep it moving in the air. The bag will be filled with gas merely to guard against the machine dropping to earth in the event of the machinery getting out of order. There will be only sufficient gas to allow the machine to come gently to the ground.

The ship will be equipped with three motors. One, of fifty horse power, will operate the lifting propellers, and the others, of ten horse power each, will run the driving propellers. The craft which Mr. Tinker is now building will be 38 feet long and 12 feet beam. He intends to enter the machine in the New York to Albany airship competition at the time of the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

It is to be built to carry three men. If it proves the success expected by the inventor and his backers larger ships, of greater carrying capacity, will be built.

It was said yesterday that representatives of this and other Governments had visited Mr. Tinker and inspected the model of his airship. His experiments with this working model, in a field near his home, have been watched with interest by East New Yorkers, all of whom declare that the machine is an unqualified success.

WIND STOPS WRIGHT.

Eighteen Miles an Hour Too Much for Limited Area, So He Didn't Fly.

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A brisk wind that swept across the parade ground at Fort Myer this evening prevented Orville Wright from attempting a flight in the aeroplane. The machine was not taken from the shed. In the early afternoon a wind velocity of twenty-five miles was registered. This dropped to between eighteen and twenty shortly after 6 o'clock, but it was fitful and uncertain. Rain, too, was threatening.

The brothers made it clear, however, that a twenty-five-mile breeze would not prevent their going up if the parade ground at the army post were larger.

In spite of the high wind and the threatening rain, a large crowd visited the army post in the hope of seeing a flight. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth drove out in her electric runabout, and she had with her the hamper that figured in her picnic of yesterday. It was filled again with sandwiches, and in addition there was plenty of tea. To-day's picnic was called off, however, when the balloon house was closed and the crowd dispersed.

Miss Katherine Wright sat patiently throughout the afternoon in the shed, waiting with her brothers for the breeze to fall.

Representative J. A. T. Hull, Chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the House, spent some time in the balloon house, inspecting the machine, and the Signal officers believe they have made a valuable convert, for Mr. Hull seemed enthusiastic over the aeroplane.

SUTTON SHOT IN TOP OF HEAD, SAYS DOCTOR

Could Have Killed Himself, but Witness Shows It Would Have Been Difficult.

DISPUTED BY COL. DOYEN

Declares the Wound Was Lower—Willing Threatened with Arrest for Being Late at Trial.

ANNAPOLIS, July 22.—The remarkable variance in the testimony of some of the naval officers, who are witnesses before the court of inquiry which is investigating the death of Lieut. James N. Sutton at the Naval Academy two years ago, was emphasized at to-day's hearing by contradictory evidence as to the location of the bullet wound which caused Sutton's death.

The question of the location of the wound has assumed importance. It would appear that it would have been a much more difficult matter for Sutton to have shot himself, lying prone on the ground with three men on top of him, if the bullet entered the top of his skull, as Surgeon George Pickrell, in charge of the marine hospital at that time, who examined Sutton's body, testified it did.

Col. Charles A. Doyen, Commandant of Marines at that time, and who holds the same post now, testified that he examined Suton's body immediately after the shooting, felt the wound in his head, and that it was located on the right side a little behind and on a line with the top of the ear. Dr. Pickrell thought Sutton might have inflicted the wound upon himself, but he made an unconvincing and awkward demonstration in court with the revolver, although he had a free right arm.

Considerable progress was made to-day and three more witnesses were disposed of. Despite Surgeon Pickrell's and Col. Doyen's testimony, Mr. Davis, counsel for Sutton's mother and sister, finished the cross-examination of Lieut. Willing, who was on the stand a part of yesterday.

Willing made an unsatisfactory witness under cross-examination. The few discrepancies which Mr. Davis showed by reading the record of his description of the scene of the shooting at the former inquiry were readily conceded by Lieut. Willing, with the remark that he testified from the best of his recollection on both occasions.

What Became of Revolvers?

Mr. Davis tried to find out from all the witnesses to-day what became of Sutton's two revolvers after the shooting.

Col. Doyen testified that he saw them and ordered Lieut. Willing to take charge of them, but he did not know what became of them until they finally got into his hands at the inquest. It was apparent that no one of the officers wanted to assume the responsibility of having the weapons about him immediately after the shooting. Sergt. James De Hart of the Marine Corps, the last witness at to-day's session, testified that some officer at the scene of the shooting handed him a revolver with the curt command to "take this." It was dark and he could not see who the officer was. De Hart soon afterward threw the revolver into the bushes on his way to the barracks, and on going out to look for it next morning could not find it.

Willing Rebuked.

An incident of the forenoon was a rebuke administered by Commander Hood to Lieut. Willing for being late for the second time, after he was expected to take the witness chair. He could offer no excuse, and the commander threatened him with arrest for contempt of court if there was a repetition of the offense.

A large number of women attended the hearing to-day. The young girls in their light gowns, accompanied by white uniformed officers, gave the courtroom a Summer background.

Lieut. Edward S. Willing resumed the stand at the opening of the court. Mr. Davis, counsel for Sutton's mother, continued his cross-examination of the witness. Willing, according to his testimony, reached the scene of the tragedy in time to see Lieuts. Adams and Sutton in a fisticuff prior to the shooting. Mr. Davis took the witness over and over the scene of the fight between Adams and Sutton but could not materially shake the officer's story.

Mr. Davis read from the records of the former inquiry, bringing out some discrepancies in Lieut. Willing's testimony. The witness said his present testimony was correct:

"The former testimony was given on the same day of the shooting, and some of it was reckless," was the Lieutenant's explanation.

Once he answered:

"I can't remember what everybody said and did on that night. No one could."

Mr. Davis handed a rusty 38-calibre revolver to the witness and asked him if he could identify it as the one he picked up on the edge of the parade ground the night Sutton was shot. Willing broke the revolver, looked it over carefully, and said it might be the same one, as its calibre and appearance were the same. The members of the board also examined the revolver. Mr. Birney, Lieut. Adams's counsel, questioned Lieut. Willing at the conclusion of Mr. Davis's cross-examination.

Not Sure of Rules.

Commander Hood showed the witness the rules in the Navy Blue Book, pertaining to Willing's duty as officer of the day at the time of the shooting, and asked him if he did not know he should have arrested any one who was unruly. Lieut. Willing said he did not recall whether or not he knew the rule at that time.

"Did you tell one of the officers to let Adams go ahead and knock Sutton's head off?" asked Mr. Davis.

"Yes, I think I made such a remark," Lieut. Willing answered.

Lieut. Willing was excused and Surgeon George Pickrell, who was in charge of the Naval Academy Hospital on the night of the shooting, testified. Dr. Pickrell heard the shots while he was standing in a window at the hospital, which was but a short distance away, and hurried to the scene. He examined Sutton's injuries, and made a careful examination of the bullet wound in his head after his death.

The bullet entered Sutton's head on top, near the back of the head and a little to the right, the witness said. This has been a much disputed point, as other physicians have testified that the wound was just back of the right ear. Dr. Pickrell stated that the shot was fired within two feet of Sutton's head, and in his opinion could have been self-inflicted. He said that Sutton's body showed no other injuries which might have caused his death.

Surgeon Pickrell said that he treated Lieuts. Adams, Osterman, Roelker, and Potts at the hospital shortly after the shooting. They had insignificant injuries. They were all very much excited and talked about the shooting. Lieuts. Adams and Osterman, as he recalled it, told him about the fight and said Sutton had shot himself while he was lying on the ground.

The witness identified a belt and holster, which he said was strapped on Sutton's leg the night of the shooting.

In answer to Mr. Davis's questions on cross-examination the surgeon said he had made an examination of Sutton's wound, although he had been careful not to disturb anything which should have been there for the inquest.

Acts Sutton Shooting.

At Mr. Davis's request the witness demonstrated with the revolver the manner in which he believed Sutton might have shot himself. Dr. Pickrell was first careful to see that the revolver was not loaded. He took the revolver in his right hand, extended his arm above his head, with his elbow bent at an awkward angle, and pointed the muzzle directly at the top of his head toward the middle and rear of the skull.

The women spectators in the courtroom seemed to enjoy the exhibition. There was an audible giggling among them. Mrs. Sutton and her daughter smiled as Dr. Pickrell broke the revolver to see that it was not loaded.

Col. Charles A. Doyen, senior officer of the Marine Corps at Annapolis at the time of the Sutton affair and now, was the next witness. Col. Doyen said Lieut. Utley appraoched him that night and told him that Sutton had killed Roelker and then shot himself.

Mr. Davis objected to the testimony as hearsay.

"I want to save time," said he.

"We have all the time we want," retorted Major Leonard.

"Of course," said Mr. Davis. "The United States Marine Corps is eternal; I am mortal."

Sutton Had a Pulse.

When Col. Doyen reached the scene, he said, he picked up Sutton's right hand, which was extended directly in front of his body, and felt for his pulse. He found he had a pulse, and ordered one of the officers near by to hurry and get the Naval Academy physician, Dr. McCormick. Sutton was dead before they could get him to the hospital.

Col. Doyen described the incidents of the shooting as they had been reported to him by the young officers concerned in the fights. He said the officers had special leave on that night because of the hop, but were due in the camp at 1 o'clock.

Major Leonard questioned Col. Doyen on redirect examination. The witness said that subsequent to the time Lieut. Willing brought the two revolvers to him after the shooting he did not know who had had them until they were returned to his custody at the inquest. He had told Lieut. Willing to take charge of them.

Col. Doyen told of a report made to him in May, 1907, that Lieut. Sutton had been placed under suspension for ten days for being under the influence of liquor and creating a disturbance in camp. He said he knew Sutton spent much of his time alone. This attracted his attention and he made inquiries and was told that Sutton did not seem to be popular.

"I was told he was overbearing and assumed a manner of superiority toward his brother officers," Col. Doyen said.

Col. Doyen said the bullet wound in Sutton's head was on the right side one inch back of the right ear on a line with the top of the ear. He said he felt of Sutton's head as he lay on the ground. Dr. Pickrell's location of the wound earlier in the day had placed it on the top of the head near the rear.

Sergt. James De Hart was the last witness of the day.

Admits His Condition.

De Hart created considerable amusement in court by frankly admitting he had been out with friends and was "slightly under the influence of liquor" on the night in question. He said, however, he knew what was going on around him. When Mr. Davis pressed the questions about his mental condition that night, Major Leonard asked that judicial notice be taken of the fact that De Hart was intoxicated. The young Sergeant's mind was quite hazy in regard to anything that was said or done that night, but he was positive that he was not one of the men sitting on Lieut. Sutton. Lieut. Bevan previously testified he was.

He was making his way to camp by "a back entrance" when he met Sutton prior to the shooting. De Hart said that Sutton carried two revolvers, and that he, De Hart, did not stop to talk with him long. The witness did not know about the trouble Sutton had in camp, but thought something was up when he saw the two revolvers. Soon afterward De Hart heard the shots, and ran back to the scene of the shooting. He could not remember recognizing any officers then except Lieut. Utley, who ordered him to the barracks.

"I did not go then," he said, "but stayed in the grass near by out of curiosity."

Mr. Davis had not finished his cross-examination of De Hart when at 4 o'clock court adjourned for the day. Commander Hood, senior member of the Board of Inquiry, announced this afternoon that court would adjourn to-morrow afternoon until Monday morning.

In answer to the request of the Judge Advocate before adjournment, Mr. Davis announced that his clients had one witness outside of those already subpoenaed by the Government, whom they would like to call. He is Charles Kennedy, a private in the Marine Corps at Norfolk, Va.

HAINS TURNS TO INVENTING.

Convict Working Out Improvements in Street Cleaning Apparatus.

Capt. Peter C. Hains, Jr., who is serving a term of eight years in Sing Sing for the shooting of William E. Annis, has turned his inventive faculties to improving the street-cleaning apparatus manufactured in the prison and used in all the large cities in this State. The inventions, when worked out, it is thought will be worth thousands of dollars to him.

News of Hains's inventions was brought from Sing Sing yesterday by his counsel, Eugene N. L. Young of Long Island City, who spent the two previous days with the convict arranging the papers for an appeal from the conviction which will be made to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court at the opening of the coming October term.

Hains is a civil engineer and an inventor, and it is said he is now in receipt of a royalty from the Hains concrete mixer. Hains got his idea while working in the draughting department of the prison tin and sheet iron works.

MORE THAN A SCORE DEAD IN GULF STORM

Property Loss Will Run to Millions —Some Towns Are Still Isolated.

PIER VICTIMS ARE RESCUED

Only Three Now Missing—Bay City Centre of Storm—Jail Prisoners Escape at Richmond.

NEW ORLEANS, July 22.—That the hurricane which swept the Gulf Coast of Texas and Louisiana yesterday resulted in more loss of life and far more damage to property than had at first been apparent was indicated this evening when points hitherto cut off from communication got into touch with the outside world. Many isolated places yet remain to be heard from.

That the property loss will run into the millions was made a certainly to-night when whole towns which were not at first believed to have suffered were definitely reported to have been wrecked.

More than a score of persons are now believed to have lost their lives, and reports from points not yet heard from may swell the death list materially.

HOUSTON, July 22.—The West Indian hurricane which swept from one end of the Texas Gulf Coast to the other yesterday caused the loss of at least twelve lives, fatal injuries to two other persons, and serious injuries to sixteen, according to details which began to arrive here to-night. Whole towns were devastated, and the damage through wrecking and ruining of property will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The dead include a man named Shaffner at Eagle Lake, three children at Bay City, a Mexican at El Campo, four persons at Palacios, a negro at Wharton, a section foreman at Kindalton, and a farmer at Ramsay. Those fatally hurt are Mrs. Hogan and daughter at Palacios.

Five of the victims of the storm at the tarpon fishing pier were picked up alive late to-day off Red Fish Reef in Upper Galveston Bay, opposite North Galveston. They were clinging to pieces of driftwood and were exhausted. It is reported from Laporte that two other persons thought to have been drowned at Tarpon Pier have been rescued. This leaves the number of missing three.

The territory around Bay City seems to have been the centre of the storm, which moved southwest from Galveston. At Bay City about 50 per cent. of the business section was damaged, including the Opera House, one bank, the Court House, the new High School building, and the city jail. In the jail the cages were left standing and the prisoners were exposed to view, but were safe. Six prisoners escaped from the jail at Richmond when the windows had been blown in and while the guards were repairing the damage.

Reports from the special train on which General Manager W. G. Van Vleck of the Southern Pacific Railroad left Houston this morning indicate that the lower coast country suffered great material damage. Some districts report that the storm was worse than the one of 1900 which devastated Galveston.

Along the Brownsville road from Kingsville in places the desolation was nearly complete. Cornfields, burned by the drought of the last month and rejuvenated by the sudden rains, were swept to the ground. Cotton fields, however, withstood the storm well.

In the oil field about Markham derricks were blown down and wells stripped of their machinery.

THREE DEAD AT DULUTH.

Property Loss from Cloudburst Estimated at $1,500,000.

DULUTH, July 22.—Following the terrific rains of Tuesday, last night's cloudburst caused devastation in Duluth. The loss, it is computed, will reach $1,500,000.

Three lives were lost. Two children were swept from their mother's side in Ninth Avenue, one body being lost in a sewer, and another child was lost in Keene's Creek, at West Duluth.

The water poured into the floor of the Bijou Theatre, where a performance was in progress, and a panic was narrowly averted.

ASHLAND, Wis., July 22.—The situation in the flood district is worse to-day. The railroad bridge and all other bridges are believed to have been swept out at Odanah. Six bridges are torn out on the Marengo River, five of them being steel. Four million feet of logs were swept into the lake at Montreal River. Train service on all roads is abandoned.

SHOT BY HER DAUGHTER.

Wealthy Chicago Woman Says She Refused Money for Mining Scheme.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Suffering from a bullet wound inflicted yesterday, Mrs. Gertrude A. Hinkley, a wealthy widow living at 4,411 Ellis Avenue, tried for hours to-day to persuade the police that the shooting was accidental. The police, arrested Mrs. Marie Mayfield, Mrs. Hinkley's daughter, whose husband is said to be in Mexica in the mining business.

According to the story finally told by Mrs. Hinkley, she is interested to the extent of $3,500 in a Mexican mining project, having invested on the advice of her daughter. Her refusal yesterday to purchase $3,500 additional stock in the enterprise led to a quarrel and the ultimate shooting by the daughter. The bullet entered the neck and came out through the mouth. The shooting was at Mrs. Mayfield's home, 180 Forty-first Street

The wounded woman promised her daughter to stand by the accident story, and was removed to her own home in an automobile last night. Under the insistent questioning of Police Inspector Hunt today she finally, according to the police, broke down. Her chance of recovery is said to be slender.

Mrs. Hinkley said she refused to give her daughter the money.

Inter-State Railways Co. Raises Wages.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—About 3,000 motormen and conductors employed by the Inter-State Railways Company on traction lines in Eastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware were surprised today when the controlling company anouced that after Aug. 1 there would be a resumption of the 18½ cents an hour wage rate from which a reduction of 1½ cents was made a year ago. The company's officials had promised an increase as soon as business warranted. No demand was made by the workmen.

RIOT AND MUTINY PREVAIL IN SPAIN

Relatives of Soldiers Ordered to Morocco Fight with the Police in Madrid.

BARCELONA TROOPS REVOLT

Threaten Officers with Bayonets, but Are Disarmed—War Is to Serve Private Interests, Newspapers Say.

MADRID, July 22.—During the night, while the Spanish troops which are to reinforce the Spanish garrison at Melilla, were preparing to leave for Malaga, the families of the soldiers surrounded the railroad station and charged the police with the object of preventing the departure of their relatives.

A desperate mêlée followed, in which the police used their swords and revolvers. At least a dozen persons were wounded and many others were arrested.

Stringent measures will be taken to suppress similar popular disturbances in connection with the departure of troops in the future.

King Alfonso has canceled all his engagements on account of the serious situation that has developed in Morocco. To-day the first line of reserves was summoned to the colors.

Parliament will be asked to vote further credits so that more reinforcements can be sent to Melilla. It is possible that Gen. Weyler, formerly Spanish Captain General of Cuba, will be placed in supreme command of the Spanish force in Morocco.

The Liberal press is joining in the popular protest against sending soldiers to the Riff coast, alleging that the war is solely for the purpose of protecting private mining interests. The newspapers demand the convocation of the Cortes and a frank statement of the Government's intentions.

BARCELONA, July 22.—A riot broke out to-day among the troops who were about to be embarked for Melilla. An entire battalion revolted and threatened the Colonel and other officers with their bayonets. Other troops were hastily summoned and the mutineers were disarmed.

BILBAO, July 22.—The Civil Governor of Bilbao, at the request of a Biscayan committee, has authorized a meeting on Sunday to protest against the Spanish-Moroccan war, on condition that it is not accompanied by a public manifestation. Nevertheless, processions are being organized and rioting is feared.

MELILLA, Morocco, July 22.—The Spanish positions here were reinforced to-day by fresh troops from Spain. During the fighting yesterday the Moors got within 800 yards of Melilla. When they retired they left 104 dead on the field.

Gen. Marina, commander of the Spanish forces in Morocco, returned here to-day from an inspection of the outposts. The General declares the Moors are displaying desperate courage and using modern weapons. He predicts a long and hard campaign.

ALGECIRAS, Spain, July 22.—The natives of the Souk region in Morocco are preaching a holy war, and are preparing to join the Moors in front of Melilla.

Melilla is the centre of a range of fortifications built along the Riff coast of Morocco in the seventeenth century in order to prevent the Moors from gaining a point from which they could again invade the Spanish coast opposite. There are valuable Spanish mining interests in the vicinity, which have been vastly improved of late by the cutting of new roads from the mines to the Port of Melilla.

Ever since the trouble around Casablanca subsided the Moors in the vicinity of Melilla have shown a disposition to resent the improvement of the Spanish mining properties, in spite of the fact that it gave employment to many of them. Raids have been frequent and much property has been destroyed. The tribesmen who have been particularly active are known as the Kabyles. At the close of the Spanish-American war a Governor of Melilla sold them, for his personal profit, several thousand Mauser rifles which had been brought back to Spain from the West Indies. This accounts for the fact that the Kabyles are armed with modern weapons.

For nearly twenty years the Kabyles opposed the French occupation of Algeria along the coast to the east. Eventually they were subdued, and since then they have continued to visit Algeria at harvest time and to spend the Winters in roving about the territory between the coast and Fez. Some of them have more or less permanent dwelling places in the mountains, where one sees their little villages, with red tiled roofs, perched on the highst summits. The Kabyles to be found on the plains, who have been working the Spanish mines, are hardly of the true stock, having in many cases adopted European manners and customs and having married foreign wives.

The Kabyles are of Berber origin; they are also Mohammedans of the Sunni sect. Ethnologists are fairly agreed that in some far-away age they occupied the whole country from Egypt to the Canary Islands. Besides being born soldiers, they inhabit a country that is filled with natural fortifications—quite as impregnable as those artificially constructed by the seventeenth century Spaniards along the coast. Herein lies their strength and their danger. To follow them, armed with Mauser rifles as they are, into their mountain fastnesses would mean an expensive campaign and great loss of life, whereas if they can be induced to attack the Spanish forts from the open, even though these works are obsolete as far as modern artillery fire is concerned, a few machine guns may make an invasion of the mountain homes of the Kabyles unnecessary.

GERMANY SENDS VON KOESTER

Will Be Her Naval Representative at Hudson-Fulton Celebration.

BERLIN, July 22.—The German Government forwarded to-day its acceptance of the invitation of the United States to participate in the Hudson-Fulton celebrations. Four warships, the names of which will be communicated later to the United States Government, will represent Germany. The admiral of the fleet, Hans Ludwig Raimund von Koester, has been selected as the naval representative of the Empire and probably will take command of the squadron, although he has retired from active service.

Admiral von Koester, who served fifty years, is regarded as the father and creator of the German navy, and exercises an immense influence in naval affairs. He is an intimate friend of the Emperor and is President of the Navy League.

FOREIGN BANKERS EXCITED.

They Think Taft's Message Has Made Chinese Loan Matter Political.

PEKING, July 22.—The personal telegram sent by President Taft to Prince Chun, the Chinese Regent, in behalf of the American claim for equal participation in the Hankow-Sze-chuen Railroad loan of $27,500,000, has created a sensation among the foreign bankers and members of the legations here.

The legations concerned affirm that the loan question until now was not recognized diplomatically, but the impression prevails that the matter has become political.

The German financiers threaten to break the concert of bankers.

CARDINAL ANDRIEU FINED.

Neither He Nor Abbe Carteau, However, Meets Penalty.

BORDEAUX, July 22.—The Correctional Court here to-day condemned Cardinal Andrieu to pay a fine of $1 and costs, and Abbé Carteau, as an accomplice, was fined $5 for inciting to disobedience of the laws under the act separating the Church and State.

Neither fine was paid.

PATTEN SUPPORTS MARKET.

Follows Wednesday's Selling by Buying and Prices Recover.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, July 22.—James A. Patten is still a bull on wheat, he said this morning. He gave a demonstration of his belief by being the best buyer in the market at the break which was reported on early trades to-day. It was his position in the market which gave other buyers courage and caused a timely recovery in prices just when 90 per cent. of the trade expected the market to go to pieces.

The occasion for the extreme bearishness on the part of the trade was the fact that the Patten house sold out about 4,000,000 bushels yesterday for September and December, and this gave rise to the belief that the bull leader had decided to retire from active trade for a time and let the market take care of itself.

July wheat broke about 3½ cents, but the other deliveries did not decline as much as was expected in view of the heavy selling by the bull leaders yesterday. Later in the session all months rallied sharply. Hedging sales against purchases of new wheat were responsible for much of the weakness in the current delivery.

Shorts took profits freely on the initial decline, helping to steady the market. Fluctuations did not cover a very wide range for any month except July, and net changes for the day were small. Most of the news was of a bearish cast, especially that from abroad, but the selling had been overdone and values rallied easily on any good buying. In the latter part of the session reports of 800,000 bushels of wheat taken for export at good prices helped give the market a better tone.

There is a story that Patten sold out his big lines of wheat yesterday because he found that the Armour following was inclined to unload from a big lien of 15,000,000 bushels of September wheat every time a little advance was forced in the market.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

SOUTHAMPTON, July 22.—The steamer Derfflinger was towed to-day off Shingle Bank, where she grounded two days ago. The vessel apparently is not injured.

VARESE, Lombardy, July 22.—The funeral of Don Carlos og Bourbon, Pretender to the Spanish throne, was held to-day in the Church at Casbeno. Afterwards the body was shipped to Triest, Austria-Hungary, where it will be buried.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 22.—The cholera situation now seems to be well under control, and the Russian authorities are confident that it will not reach the proportions of the 1908 epidemic.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Legislation by the Brazilian State of Para, aimed at the business of exporting rubber by foreigners, has failed to become effective because of the non-issuance of regulations to carry out its provisions.

Widow of Late President of Chamber of Commerce Pays Tax on All Her Husband's Bequests.

HER SHARE IS $9,617,091

Schedules, Including $1,000,000 Left to the Museum of Natural History, Filed with the Surrogate.

The valuation of the estate of Morris K. Jesup, late President of the Chamber of Commerce, who died on Jan. 22, 1908, according to the report filed yesterday in the Surrogate's Court by Appraiser W. Holden Weeks, was, at the time of Mr. Jesup's death, $12,814,894, in net personal and real estate.

The gross personal estate amounted to $11,346,543, from which are deducted debts, $124,894; administration expenses, $10,000; commissions to executors, $402,643, making a total of $537,541, and leaving the net personalty $10,809,001. Under his will the Museum of Natural History, of which the testator was President at the time of his death, gets $1,000,000.

CONTEST OF TORPEY WILL.

Nurse Disputes Negro's Claim to $30,000 Left by the Aged Cook.

A contest has quickly been begun for the estate of Bridget Torpey, the septuagenarian cook, who died six weeks ago in a house at 221 West Eighteenth Street, which is tenanted by negroes, leaving an estate of $30,000.

Charles Johnson, a negro, who was a butler in the family of Mrs. N. B. Taft of 46 West Twenty-fifth Street when Bridget Torpey was the cook in that house, filed a will, which he said the Torpey woman had made in July, 1908, leaving to him her entire estate.

Johnson explained that after Bridget Torpey left Mrs. Taft's employ, she needed nursing and he took her into his family. The estate she willed him, he said, for his kindness to her.

Miss Margaret McGowan Bennett, a trained nurse, of 244 West 114th Street, has engaged H. N. Holde, a lawyer, of 60 Wall Street, to contest the will Johnson filed, claiming that in a later will, made last November, Bridget Torpey gave Miss Bennett all her estate excepting about $2,000, which goes to charity. Miss Bennett says she nursed the Torpey woman for years and that Johnson's claim of having cared for the woman is untrue.

Miss Bennett's lawyer filed the will, making her the beneficiary of the estate yesterday. Mr. Holde declares he will charge, when the case comes up before the Surrogate, that the will leaving the estate to Johnson was signed by Bridget Torpey under a misapprehension, and that the will, anyhow, is invalid, because of the later one.

TO EXTRADITE MISS BEATTIE.

She Is Accused of Swindling the Gorham Manufacturing Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 22.—Eleanor Lorraine Beattie, the young woman accused of swindling the Gorham Manufacturing Company of New York out of jewelry valued at $1,000, will be brought up in the Bow Street Police Court to-morrow or Saturday morning and application will be made for her extradition to America.

Lieut. John Flood of the Detective Bureau of New York City is here to take charge of her and to escort her to the Tombs.

Eleanor Lorraine Beattie was arrested in London on July 14. It was charged that she had made a number of purchases on credit at the Gorham store, impersonating Mrs. Margaret B. Stearns, a former friend of hers and a woman of wealth.

She was traced to London through a sketch made by a clerk in the store, and some of the jewelry was found in pawnshops here.

At the time of her arrest it was reported that Miss Beattie had retained counsel and would fight extradition.

FAMOUS PAINTING COMING.

Whistler's Nocturne, "Valparaiso," Is Bought for America.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, July 22.—Whistler's famous nocturne in blue and gold of "Valparaiso" has been bought for America and has gone to join the important collection of Whistler paintings and drawings in the United States.

BOLIVIA AND PERU AGREE.

Will Negotiate Directly with Each Other Regarding Disputed Territory.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—There is a prospect of an amicable adjustment of the differences between Bolivia and the Argentine Republic. Official information reached the State Department to-day that with a view to averting possible hostilities between those countries, the Governments of Bolivia and Peru, the latter the beneficiary of the boundary award, have mutually agreed to open negotiations directly with each other and without the intervention of any other nation in the hope of arranging a modification of the Argentine territorial award which will be satisfactory to all parties concerned.

No details other than these have been received by this Government and it is not known whether the initiative was taken by Bolivia or Peru, but the fact that negotiations are under way is a matter of much gratification to the officials of the State Department, who have strong hopes that further trouble will be averted.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—At the request of the two Governments the Secretary of State has authorized the American Ministers at La Paz and at Buenos Ayres to take charge, respectively, of the interests of Argentine and Bolivia. This is believed to be the first time on record when two countries that have broken off diplomatic relations with each other have each intrusted their interests to the representatives of the United States.

BUENOS AYRES, Argentina, July 22.—In consequence of the rupture of diplomatic relations between Argentina and Bolivia, the Argentine Minister of Foreign Affairs has notified the Paraguayan Chargé d'Affaires here that the President of Argentina has declined to act as arbitrator in the question delimiting the boundary of Bolivia and Paraguay, which he agreed to do in 1907.

RAILROAD MEN IN POLITICS.

Employes in Cuyahoga Plan Club and National Political Organization.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 22.—Railroad employes are planning to enter politics. They are planning to form organizations in every important railway centre in the United States for the purpose of electing men to the various State Legislatures, and to Congress, who will further legislation looking to the betterment of the railroad men and work to repeal any that is adverse.

Cuyahoga County has been selected as the place to launch the movement. Seymour Davis, Lake Shore conductor, is the prime mover in the project, and he is being seconded by Arthur H. Grills, the assistant stationmaster of the Union Depot. Alredy more than 5,000 of the railroad men who live within the county limits have pledged their support to the movement. During the next ten days a meeting of these men will be called, when the entire plans will be explained to them, after which the Cuyahoga County Railroad Men's Club will be incorporated.

The approval and co-operation of the officials of the railroads, with important offices in Cleveland, have been obtained by the employes behind the movement.

"As soon as the club is formally launched in Cuyahoga County," said Stationmaster Grills, "which will be within a few days, we shall start similar clubs throughout the country. There are so many thousands of railroaders in the United States that the organization of the railroad men's political clubs is bound to have a great influence in elections—and we mean to make this influence felt."

CUT OFF BY MOTHER, DAUGHTER WILL SUE

Mrs. Van Everon Says McWhirter, to Whom Mrs. Parmlee Left Her Estate, Used Undue Influence.

LOVED HER PARENT DEARLY

Only Child Says She Never Had a Quarrel with Her Mother—A Business Arrangement, Lawyer Says.

Mrs. Grace E. Van Everon of 356 West 145th Street announced yesterday that she would start a contest at once over the will of her mother, Mrs. Imogene Parmlee, filed for probate in the Surrogates' Court on Wednesday. The will, without mentioning her daughter, bequeaths all her property, amounting to several thousand dollars, to John T. McWhirter, a dealer in chemicals at 290 Broadway, who lives at 356 West 145th Street. The will also names McWhirter as executor.

When asked yesterday if she was satisfied with the will made by her mother Mrs. Van Everon said indignantly:

"Certainly not. Would you be satisfied if you were the only child, and your mother, whom you had loved more than anything on earth, died and left all she possessed to a stranger? I am going to get a lawyer to-morrow, and start the case at once."

"What do you assign as the reason for this strange action on the part of your mother?" the reporter asked.

"Undue influence," replied the disinherited daughter.

"When I first heard the terms of the will," she continued, "I could not believe my ears, and thought there must be some big mistake until I called on the lawyer, Frederick E. S. Anderson, at 141 Broadway, this morning, and he told me that there was nothing for me in my mother's will."

"The lawyer said to-day that it was purely a business arrangement between your mother and Mr. McWhirter. Do you know of any such arrangement?" Mrs. Van Everon was asked.

"No, I do not know anything about it," the daughter replied, "except that by exercising his influence over my mother she has cut me out of her will. I am her only child, and never had a quarrel with her in my life."

Mrs. Van Everon is about 23 years old and was married three weeks ago. She was born in Pocatello, Idaho, which was her mother's native State. Her mother was ill for two months before her death, and was only 45 years old, having married Mr. Parmlee when she was 16 years old.

Mr. McWhirter, when asked about the will yesterday, said:

"There is nothing in this talk of cutting off Mrs. Van Everon. She has not been cut off. She is living in the house with me now. I have known Mrs. Parmlee for several years, and we were close friends. Any statement about the will must come from Frederick E. Anderson of 141 Broadway, who has charge of the case."

The lawyer had no reason to give for Mrs. Parmlee's failure to mention her daughter in her will, except that it had been a business arrangement between the two parties concerned.

KILLED IN THE POST OFFICE.

Clerk Crushed to Death Under a Heavy Elevator Car.

John Fox, 55 years old, an old employe of the Post Office, who lived at 306 West 142d Street, was crushed to death yesterday morning in one of the freight elevators on the Mail Street side of the General Post Office. His body was found by employes in the basement well.

Fox had been stock clerk in the cashier's department of the Post Office for thirty-eight years, and was subject to fainting spells. Yesterday morning he went to the stockroom on the mezzanine floor to get postal cards and stamped envelopes. He loaded the elevator full and then as there was not room for him to get aboard, walked to the basement, opened the door of the well, and pulled the controlling rope for the car to descend.

It is supposed that he was overcome with dizziness and fell directly under the car.

VACATION SCHOOLS CROWDED.

Twenty-nine Now Open Here—112,168 People at 246 Playgrounds.

Dr. W. H. Maxwell, City Superintendent of Schools, announced yesterday that vacation schools are being conducted from 9 A. M. to noon in twenty-nine buildings, with a registration of 21,316 and an average attendance for the week ended July 16 of 19,052. The classes in the common branches are overcrowded, says Dr. Maxwell.

In addition, there are 246 vacation playgrounds conducted by the Board of Education—154 indoor playgrounds, 9 outdoor playgrounds, 7 kindergarten centres, 65 playgrounds for mothers and babies, and 11 evening roof playgrounds.

The average attendance at these playgrounds of all kinds for the week ended Saturday, July 17, was 112,168. The average attendance for the corresponding week in the year 1908 was 76,200.

DECOY FOR A BLACK HANDER.

Young Man Who Was Looking for $2,000 Trapped by the Police.

Antonio Romano of 376 Bowery was arrested yesterday when he turned over a rock in Carlton Avenue, Arverne, expecting to find beneath it $2,000, which an Arverne gardener had been warned to put there or die. Instead the alleged Black Hander was pounced upon by detectives from the Italian squad, and after a short tussle was subdued.

Several days ago Rosario Librizzi of 37 Dodge Avenue complained to the police that he was receiving threatening letters through the mails. Some were written in blood, while others had the skull and crossbones signs on them, but all were to the effect that if the Arverne gardener did not leave $2,000 at a certain point by Thursday he would surely be killed. In order that there would be perfect understanding between the writer of the notes and the gardener a vacant lot was chosen as the most likely place to put the money. The police ordered Librizzi to go ahead and follow the writer's directions.

The sleuths concealed themselves near the spot designated in the letters. The gardener put a package of stage money under the rock and walked off. Soon Romano appeared and just as he heaved over the rock the sleuths pounced on him. The prisoner was armed with a knife and revolver. He tried vainly to use them on the sleuths. He is under charges of extortion and attempted felonious assault.

TAX RATE CERTAIN TO GO UP.

It Is Likely to be at Least 1.70, an Increase of Nine Points.

Mayor McClellan announced yesterday the special meeting of the Aldermen to fix the tax rate for the coming year for July 26. The books were opened by the Tax Board several days ago for public inspection in the library at the City Hall. It is estimated that the rate will be at least 1.70, an increase of nine points, three or four points above the normal increase. Controller Metz declared, however, just before he sailed for Europe that he did not believe the rate would be over 1.67.

Fire Threatens St. Alphonsus Church.

A fire early yesterday morning on the fourth floor of D. Arnould's candy factory at 385 Canal Street threatened for a time St. Alphonsus Roman Catholic Church at 310 West Broadway. Its steeple is under repair and was surrounded by a light inflammable scaffold. Chief Croker sent two firemen to the scaffold with a line of hose, and they kept flying sparks from setting it alight. Meanwhile the Rev. Peter Ryan, rector of the church, and the eighteen priests who live in the rectory next door, began to remove some of the more valuable vestments from the sacristy, but soon ceased. The damage was estimated at $10,000.

A great many people brighten their polished floors by wiping them, once or twice a month, with a cloth dipped in milk.

That is not a bad plan; but it is open to one serious objection. Milk brightens the floors but it does not clean them.

The way to clean, and at the same time, to brighten them, is to use Ivory Soap and tepid water. Apply with a soft cloth. Don't use much water. Wipe dry with another soft cloth (dry).

COHALAN TO DEFENSE OF BUILDING CODE

Denies Using Political Influence to Favor His Clients, the Hollow Tile Makers.

KENNEALLY DEFIES LABOR

Hopes the Code Will Put the Metallic Lathers Out of Business—Mayor Hears Supporters' Side.

Mayor McClellan finished yesterday the hearings on the new Building Code after another all-day session, in which he heard those favoring the document. Particular interest was attached to the appearance of Alderman William P. Kenneally, representative in the Board of Charles F. Murphy's home district, Chairman of the Buildings Committee and leader of the majority of the Revision Commission, and of Daniel F. Cohalan, Grand Sachem of Tammany Hall.

Mr. Cohalan spoke as counsel for the National Fireproofing Company, the largest manufacturer of hollow tile bricks in the country, which, it has been declared, will obtain a decided advantage over all other fireproofing concerns by the approval of the code. He devoted himself entirely to the political side of the squabble over the code, and declared emphatically that he had not used his political influence to further the interests of his clients and that his connection with the code had been purely that of counsel.

After the hearing the Mayor would give no intimation of what he will probably do with the code. From his attitude during the session it was clear, however, that he is still convinced that many of its provisions are objectionable. He expects to announce his decision early next week, as he has set Wednesday as the date for his return to his interrupted vacation.

"The newspapers have printed a great deal about this code that they should not have," said Mr. Cohalan, who was one of the last speakers yesterday. "Because of my slight interest in politics and the fact that I am counsel for the National Fireproofing Company, it has been taken for granted that politics has played a large part in the passage of this code.

"Comments have been against the code on account of my political connections and not on the merits of the document. Much that has been said would not have been said had the code been carefully examined and considered. The argument has been very one sided. The forces who are interested in having the code defeated have carried on a very excellent campaign of acceleration.

"To turn at once to the principal point of contention. This code for the first time in this country recognizes cinder concrete, and not only recognizes it, but also defines it. We say that when the code calls for the use of cinders as a component part of concrete, it is right and fair that those cinders should be non-combustible, in so far as it is possible from the nature of the ingredients. The question should not be one of cost, but simply of safe methods of construction.

"The National Fireproofing Company does not hold a monopoly of the hollow-tile industry. There is no such thing as a trust in the manufacture of hollow-tile bricks. We have several very live and active competitors."

John D. Moore, the engineer, who, as a member of the majority of the Revision Committee, was one of the principal draughters of the code, was the first speaker. He read a letter from Walter Cook, a city architect and member of the Board of Examiners, in which he declared that he is in sympathy with granting the broadest possible powers to the Superintendent of Buildings.

"We have had, and will have in the future," he said, "Building Superintendents who will not need any check placed upon them, who will decide rightly matters left to their discretion."

"Every human being who holds public office needs some sort of check," interrupted the Mayor. "We may assume that a public official is honest, but he may be inefficient."

C. H. Cullen, an architect, another member of the majority of the Revision Commission, cited several instances of the failure of concrete construction, through bad mixing, placing particular emphasis on the collapse of the Eastman Building, in Rochester, after which it was found that shavings and dirt had been mixed into the concrete in the columns.

John Gill and James McGail, Jr., both representing bricklayers' unions, spoke in favor of the provisions limiting the height of reinforced concrete buildings.

"Do your organizations lay hollow tile fireproof bricks?" asked the Mayor of the latter.

"Yes, Sir."

"Do other trades lay them?"

"No, we know how to handle them and don't allow anybody else to do this kind of work."

This caused a laugh, and the labor men were much confused when the point of the Mayor's questions struck them.

Paul Starrett, President of the Fuller Construction Company, and also a member of the majority of the Revision Commission, declared: "I realize that the code is not perfect, but its adoption will mean a great advance in safety and good construction. It would be a miracle if we had devised a code that would suit every one, but this is a great advance. It would be best to try it out; set it working, and then remedy it where it is wrong."

W. D. Henry, President of the National Fireproofing Company, declared that the statement that under the new code his company would do $6,000,000 worth of business in the city in a year was an exaggeration. "One million dollars would be much nearer the figure," said he.

"The principal people who are opposing this code," he continued, "are the cement interests. This industry is a trust. All the proof you need of this is that they ask 90 cents for cement in this city that can be bought in Pittsburg and elsewhere for 50 cents."

James J. Conlin, representing the Plasterers' Union, was the next speaker. He was followed by T. V. Johnson, Vice President of the National Fireproofing Company. Mr. Johnson started to read from a book of rules of the Board of Fire Underwriters, seeking to show that it places extra premium on buildings in which cinder concrete fireproofing is used.

"What is the date of that book?" asked the Mayor.

"This year," replied Mr. Johnson.

C. F. Shalcross of the board then interrupted and cried, "That's an old book."

"What year is it, Mr. Shalcross?" asked the Mayor.

"1905."

Alderman Kenneally devoted his attention particularly to the protest of labor men against the code. He declared that the committee of the Central Federated Union which appeared before the Mayor on Wednesday was not representative.

"Do you mean that the union is not acting in good faith in opposing the code?" asked the Mayor.

"I mean that the vote by which the code was condemned was cast by men who are not interested in the building trades and know nothing of these matters. A representative of the Metal Lathers' Union has said that they will be driven out of business if this code becomes a law. This is ridiculous. They never had more than four or five men on any one job in this city at one time."

John F. Taggert of the union, who made this contention at Wednesday's hearing, pushed forward and cried:

"That statement is false, your Honor."

The Mayor tried to stop him, but he spoke for several minutes before he could be suppressed, reiterating that what he had said was true. When he had finished, Kenneally remarked:

"Well, if the requirement of suitable concrete construction will put them out of business, I want to go on record in favor of putting them out of business."

Names Mixed in Schoolboy's Arrest.

On the authority of a news agency THE TIMES printed a few days ago the statement that Philip Leight, a teacher in Public School 75, at 25 Norfolk Street, had caused the arrest of Michael Murphy, a schoolboy, for stealing his wallet, containing $15. It appears that the complaint was actually made by Morris Klein, a teacher, of 331 East Thirteenth Street, and was backed up by Samuel B. Leight, a commission merchant, of 437 Madison Avenue, cousin of Philip Leight. The accused boy's name as entered on the police records is Jacob, alias Moses, Vogel.

MERELY A PRIVATE MATTER.

Recovery of a Stolen Necklace Entirely Personal to Police Lieut. Dunn.

No official information could be elicited yesterday at Police Headquarters about the diamond necklace of fifty-four stones, weighing three-eighths of a carat each, said to have been stolen from a resident of Stamford, Conn., pawned here by a woman, and subsequently recovered by the police.

News of the recovery reached THE TIMES on Tuesday night from Chief of Police Brennan of Stamford, who declared that the police of this city telephoned him to say that they had the necklace, or, at least, knew where it could be found. Police Headquarters here protested that it knew nothing of any necklace. This statement was repeated yesterday. Finally a reporter asked Lieut. Dunn, in the Detective Bureau, about it.

"Oh!" said Lieut. Dunn, "that is a private matter of my own that I was asked to look into by a gentleman, and was pledged to secrecy. It has nothing to do with the department. No, there is nothing for publication."

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., July 22.—The diamond necklace of fifty-four stones in possession of the New York Police Department is the property of Mrs. Mary O. Van Buren, a wealthy woman of Sound Beach, Conn. Mrs. Van Buren, at her Summer home to-night, gave so minute a description of the jewels that there is no doubt in the minds of the police here or in Mulberry Street, New York, that they are hers.

How they got into a pawnshop is a mystery that a New York detective Lieutenant is now trying to solve with the assistance of the local police.

The jewels were pawned in New York on Tuesday by a stylishly dressed woman for a ridiculously small sum of money. The woman had a railroad ticket on the New Haven road from New York to Stamford. The real value of the jewels is $5,000. The police here hint at scandal in connection with the case. They do not believe that the thief was a person in humble station. This belief is based upon the manner and style of dress of the person who pawned the necklace.

PROPHECY LED HER TO STEAL.

Girl Says Fortune Teller Told Her to Break Into Mrs. Henry's Flat.

Artina Sandron, a Finnish girl, of 364 West Fifty-eighth Street, in pleading guilty yesterday before Judge O'Sullivan in General Sessions to burglary in the third degree, told the court that she was led to commit crime through the prophecy of a fortune teller.

The advice to the girl, according to her statement, was to enter the apartment of Mrs. Minnie Henry, at 150 West 103d Street, on the night of May 19 to get a pot of gold that was waiting for her. The girl went to the apartment, forced an entrance through the front door, and, not finding the gold, took several dresses and some jewelry from Mrs. Henry's rooms. She was arrested later.

Judge O'Sullivan suspended sentence and put the girl in charge of Miss Miner, a probation officer.

NO BATONYI RECONCILIATION.

Denials of the Report Both Here and in Newport.

Denial was made here and in Newport yesterday of a report that the differences that have existed between Frank Work and Aurel Batonyi, resulting in the latter's separation from his wife and much litigation, have been settled. Mr. Work, according to the report, had fixed a comfortable sum of money on Batonyi, and it was intimated that soon the Batonyis might be reconciled.

As a basis for the report, it was stated that Batonyi has been making improvements on his property at Middletown costing $25,000, and that the place is being put in readiness for his occupancy when he returns next month from a trip to Europe.

Newton Adams, Batonyi's lawyer in Newport, said yesterday that there was no truth in the report that his client had received any settlement from Mr. Work. Similar denials were made in this city.

YOU'RE GOING TO LOSE MONEY

Said the Gypsy Fortune Teller, Slipping $10 Out of His Pocket.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., July 22.—"You're going to lose money soon, but not much," was the warning a gypsy this morning gave to Plumber William Dickson, as she was reading his palm in his store. He paid her the quarter and she departed.

An hour afterward he found he had lost some money, and the sentence quoted above recurred to him. His pocket had been picked of $10.

The police were a half hour behind the gypsies out of the city. No arrest has been made.

ANKLE BROKEN IN SUBWAY.

Guard Closed the Door on Miss Fogarty, Whose Foot Was Crushed.

Agnes M. Fogarty of 174 West Ninety-fourth Street had her right ankle broken while trying to get on a Brooklyn express train at the Fourteenth Street station of the Subway yesterday afternoon. Miss Fogarty, who has been spending the Summer with her family in the Mott Avenue section of Bayswater, Far Rockaway, came to the city yesterday to do some shopping. As Miss Fogarty was about to enter the train the guard slammed the door. Her foot was caught between the train and the platform. Dr. Mulcahy, a friend, whom she met on the station, took her to her home at Far Rockaway.

Gas Rebates Unclaimed.

The Northern Union Gas Company has already reported an unclaimed balance of gas rebate money amounting to $24,983. Both sums will be made the subject of a special order by the court.

EAST SIDE FLOCKS TO NEW PLAYGROUND

It Is for Children Under Ten and Their Mothers, and Costs a Penny a Month.

200 JOINED IT YESTERDAY

Hammocks for the Babies and Swings and See-saws—New Place at Rivington and Cannon Streets.

If you were a small boy and your papa asked you what you would like to be when you grew up, you'd probably answer without a moment's hesitation, either "a policeman" or "a baseball player."

Fancy the joy of combining the two!

And yet that is just what one small boy in Rivington Street has done.

When young Israel Flatmann appeared yesterday morning with a red ribbon across his breast there was great excitement in the pushcart district. Maurice Goldberg observed it first, and having discovered the reason for and purpose of the new decoration he spread the news broadcast.

"Izzie's for a p'lic'man," he said. "He watches a yard at Rivington and Cannon, and keeps the kids from bustin' der game. Its mostly for childer, and yet pay a penny a month. Izzie gets to be baseball Captain fer it."

All of which lucid information had the effect of drawing a crowd of nearly two thousand children and many mothers early yesterday to the corner of Rivington and Cannon Streets, where the Park and Playground Association opened a new playground at 2 o'clock. This particular playground, which is very small, and located in the centre of one of the most congested districts, is for children under ten and their mothers. It costs the children a penny a month to belong to it.

Howard Bradstreet, Secretary of the Association, was on hand early and had engaged Israel Flatmann and several other small boys to act as guardians of the peace. The reward for this virtue is a chance to play in the association's new baseball grounds, which will soon be opened in the same neighborhood. The piece of ground, which covers about three lots, has been lent to the association by the Corning Clark estate. Swings have been erected and hammocks and see-saws.

Mothers with babies in their arms stood in a long line down Rivington Street before the gate opened, and when 2 o'clock came, the first woman who entered had two children in her arms, one of them sound asleep. She carried them to the hammocks, and soon both were sleeping and swinging.

Now a hammock in one of these playgrounds is not like a hammock at Larchmont, but it has its advantages. The Larchmont hammock is softer perhaps, but it has meshes with holes, and if you happen to have some candy in your hands, or other goody off papa's pushcart it might drop through. No, on whole, the canvas hammock with a tight base is better.

All the hammocks were soon full of happy babies, while the swings were swinging with other children and the see-saws were crowded so full that they seemed in danger of breaking. Several teachers and nurses were on the grounds to show the children new games and to care for anybody who might get hurt. It was a gay day for all. The windows of all the surrounding tenements were filled with women who looked down on the unaccustomed sight.

"We'll let 200 register to-day," said Mr. Bradstreet, "and then not any more until Monday, when 100 more may register. Each child, upon payment of a penny gets a ticket which will admit him for a month. Eventually we shall put out 1,000 tickets and even more if we are able to take care of them. Perhaps eventually we may divide the hours, having one set in the morning and another in the afternoon.

"We should like to build a playhouse here with five stories, so that we could accommodate ever so many more mothers and children on the first floor, larger children on the next floor, and so on. The building would have open sides, so that it would really be all outdoors."

The children yesterday were all very good, and the "p'lice" boys really had very little to do. That little, however, they did efficiently, and they are all going to be baseball players, Mr. Bradstreet said.

TROLLEY ROAD AT AUCTION.

Westchester County Line to be Sold to Pay Bondholders.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., July 22.—Justice Martin J. Keogh to-day appointed H. R. Barrett, a lawyer, referee to sell the Tarrytown, White Plains & Mamaroneck Railway Company, a trolley line, at foreclosure sale

The application for the sale was made by the Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York, acting as trustee for the bondholders. The bonded indebtedness of the company amounts to about $300,000.

The company is now in the hands of Receiver J. Addison Young of New Rochelle, who recently purchased twenty-five new "pay-as-you-enter" cars and has put the roadbed in condition and made other improvements.

It is expected that the road will be sold in September or October.

ERIE RESTORES OLD PAY.

Wages Put Back on Basis In Force Before January Last Year.

The Erie Railroad announced yesterday the restoration of salaries of officers and employes, which were reduced in January, 1908, to the rates previously in force. The increases were made by resolution of the Board of Directors at its meeting yesterday, and in making the announcement it was explained that the "condition of the company had proved so satisfactory that the restoration would go into effect as of July 1."

Last year the Erie failed by $2,199,000 to earn its fixed charges, the net earnings dropping to $8,918,000, which was a decrease of $6,820,000 compared with the year before. With the fiscal year just ended the tide turned, and the company's earnings have since been on the increase.

Cherokee Club to Sell a House.

The Cherokee Club, at 334 East Seventy-ninth Street, Tammany headquarters in the Twentieth District, received permission from Supreme Court Justice Bischoff yesterday to sell its property at 332 East Seventy-ninth Street to Eva E. Muller for $13,500, in order to pay off a mortgage. This property was obtained twelve years ago, so the petition says, "to protect its clubhouse from having politically unfriendly and undesirable neighbors."

Moving Picture Men Organize.

Supreme Court Justice Bischoff approved yesterday the incorporation of the National Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of this State, organized for the "protection of its members, their elevation and benefit, and to deal with persons in the business who violate the law." The incorporators are W. M. McKenzie, Louis Maas, A. D. Jacobs, F. P. McCutchen, O. I. Lanberger, and C. K. Kreingwald.

CHANCES FOR MEN OVER FIFTY

Employer Offers a Permanent Place to One on His Farm.

Advertisements from men and women over 50 out of work and from employers willing to give jobs to such persons came in all the week up to 12 o'clock yesterday, the limit set for receiving them. All such will be printed free of charge on Sunday.

Among yesterday's letters were two offering employment to men who have advertised in THE TIMES. Writing from Cobalt, Conn., one man said:

> Having been a daily reader for many years of your paper, and having recently become interested in the worthy campaign inaugurated to give the "boys" over 50 a chance to "look in" again, here is a good opportunity for one of them. The writer is a New York City gentleman owning a farm at above place, twelve minutes' walk from the station, and am in need of a reliable, intelligent man to do general farm work and take entire charge of the place the year around and care for three horses, cow, and poultry.
>
> Would prefer a married man, to whom would offer a four-room, homelike cottage on the premises, wood for fuel, one quart of milk daily, vegetables, and $30 per month wages.
>
> It depends upon the individual as to additional inducements. Please have replies sent to Box 16 Cobalt.

This is the other letter:

> A man of any old age able to do a fair day's work at whitewashing on a scaffolding can get a two or three weeks' job by applying to the Superintendent of The Hillhurst, 154 to 160 East Ninety-first Street.

From Bedford City, in the heart of the Virginia Blue Ridge Mountains, comes this pathetic appeal for help:

> I have just seen a copy of THE TIMES and note your splendid charity of trying to help the men and women of 50 and over who are out of work. As I am in this class and have been repeatedly turned down because of my gray head, and having been out of work for more than three months, a family to support, and my little resources about exhausted, I ask your aid, though I fear I am too far away to be benefited. I am 52 years old, have vigorous health, and can do a full day's work. Am a bookkeeper and office man, but will do anything.

The mails brought numerous other letters from advertisers expressing their gratitude for the benefits conferred by THE TIMES's campaign.

AUTO DERBY ON LONG ISLAND.

Races Will Probably Be Held Sept. 21—Course from 100 to 250 Miles.

An automobile Derby is to be held this Fall on Long Island. Arrangements were made yesterday by the Motor Contest Association of New York with the Board of Supervisors of Suffolk County, and the races will probably be held on Sept. 21.

President W. J. Morgan of the Motor Contest Association, accompanied by A. D. Corwin of Riverhead, L. I., yesterday took the Supervisors over the course they desired set apart for the races. The course is slightly over twenty-two miles in length.

The course selected by the association and approved yesterday by the Supervisors is as follows: Start at Riverhead, to Mattituck over the main road; along Sound Avenue to Roanoke Avenue, along Roanoke Avenue to Riverhead, finishing at Main Street.

There are to be four classes in the contests planned. Cars of the first class will cover 250 miles, second class cars will cover 200 miles, third class 150 miles, and fourth class 100 miles. The contest will be between stock cars valued at from $2,500 to $5,000, as classified by the association.

Longwood Tennis Results.

BOSTON, July 22.—The five matches to-day in the tennis tournament of the Longwood Cricket Club brought the playing in the Eastern championship doubles to the semi-finals, leaving N. W. Niles and A. S. Dabney, Jr., of Boston to meet R. C. Seaver and G. T. Putnam of Boston, and W. J. Clothier and W. F. Johnson of Philadelphia to meet E. P. Larned of New Jersey and R. D. Little of New York. Four matches were played in the Longwood singles, finishing all in the fourth round, with one in the fifth, the latter being won by R. H. Palmer of New York, who thereby goes into the semi-finals. Palmer defeated Dwight F. Davis of St. Louis, formerly National champion.

National Champion William A. Larned arrived at Longwood to-day, but stated that he was not yet certain whether he would play in the challenge match for the Longwood Cup, on which he has one leg. The champion has been suffering from water on the knee, resulting from an accident while playing in New York a few weeks ago. The summary:

Horses and Horsemen.

The Stewards at Yonkers yesterday were called on to consider a new form of complaint against Jockey E. Dugan, when after the running of the Wakefield Stakes, James McLaughlin, trainer of Fauntleroy, made a protest against Dugan, who rode August Belmont's Dullcare. Dullcare crossed his field just after the start and jostled his way through, interfering with Fauntleroy and other horses. No complaint was made by the jockeys in the race, however, and McLaughlin on his own account called the attention of the Stewards to the rough riding. The Stewards made no announcement of action taken.

W. L. Oliver, for many years noted as a trainer, has established himself as a trainer in England, and has succeeded in getting together a public stable made up of horses owned by Englishmen.

The motor cycle policemen, who have had a busy time enforcing the speed laws on automobilists between the city and the Yonkers race course, yesterday captured Thomas Shaw, one of the spectacular figures among the professional betting men, and Shaw and his party missed the first three races through the necessity of going to a police station to furnish bail.

The weights for the Knickerbocker Handicap, six furlongs, for three-year-olds, to be run at Yonkers next Tuesday, were announced yesterday with Fitz Herbert, 130 pounds; Joe Madden, 120, and Prince Gal, 113, the high weights of the twenty-three horses handicapped.

Jockey Walter Miller, who early in the Summer went to England to find employment as a rider, had his first mount on the English turf in the race for the Khedive Plate, at Newmarket, on H. P. Whitney's Hamburg-Blue Girl colt in a field of thirty-one runners. Miller's mount was unplaced, the second starter from the Whitney Stable, Top of the Morning, finishing second, with "Skeets" Martin up, to the Amphioe-Ore colt.

VANDERBILT SLOOP WINS FOURTH RACE

105 BOATS TAKE PART

Mischief Wins in New Rochelle Class by One Second—Exciting Finishes in a Southwest Breeze.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, who has sailed his fifty-seven-footer Aurora in every regatta but one of the present Larchmont Club race series, was at the wheel of his racing sloop yesterday and beat his rivals, Istalena and Winsome, in an admirably sailed race. This was the Aurora's fourth consecutive victory and gives her the series cup in her class, whatever the outcome may be of the two remaining races. The three big sloops made an interesting race over their 30½-mile course in the Sound, making a wonderfully pretty finish, Aurora beating Istalena by 4 minutes and 5 seconds, and Winsome being but 51 seconds behind the latter boat.

In a moderate southwest wind, which freshened materially before the end of the race, 105 boats started in 24 classes in the fourth regatta of the race week series. The schooner class was the only one that failed to fill well, and the yawl Polaris sailed with the schooner Miladi, the former winning handily on corrected time. Gardenia, although finishing first among the Class M sloops, was defeated by the Boston sloop Dorello on corrected time by nearly 12 minutes. The only boat of the fleet that failed to finish was Lawrence Darr's Eleanora, sailing with Dorello and Gardenia. She broke her jib halyards on the second round and withdrew.

CHALMERS NO. 3 DROPS OUT.

First Important Withdrawal in Contest for the Glidden Trophy.

Special to The New York Times.

KEARNEY, Neb., July 22.—The first important withdrawal in the annual endurance run of the American Automobile Association came this evening, when the Chalmers-Detroit, No. 3, competing for the Glidden Trophy, quit the contest. Engine trouble developed, and the automobile was abandoned at noon on to-day's run, her passengers arriving here by rail this evening. The No. 3 had been in difficulty for three days, having a total in penalties yesterday of 206 4-10 points, with a suspended penalty last night following its late arrival at Council Bluffs.

The only new penalties announced this evening were 1 4-10 on the Jewell, No. 111, (Hower Cup Class,) for spark plug and labor, and 6 points on the Chalmers-Detroit, No. 526, (Detroit Cup Division,) 5.8 being for work on commutator and .2 for tightening motor bolts.

A correction was also announced to-night on previous penalization of the Moline, No. 102, (Hower Class,) from 30.2 to 16.1 because outside labor was not used for troubles as supposed.

The run to-day was 204 miles, four miles longer than the route originally called for, because of bridges and roads under repair. It was the longest so far on the tour, yet the general quality of the roads was so high that it proved almost the easiest up to date.

Council Bluffs was left behind this morning, the Missouri River first being crossed into Nebraska, the seventh State that the tourists have entered since the run began. There was no stop in Omaha.

Although the roads were remarkably good to-day, there was one short muck hole that caused more trouble than any similar spot in the 1,500 miles covered so far. The heavy Thomas car from Buffalo sank in the soft mud and had to be shoveled out, the passengers standing up to their knees in mud and slime to do it.

HARRIMAN'S QUISETTA WINS.

Five Heats Necessary to Determine Victor at Parkway Meeting.

E. H. Harriman's Quisetta won a well-earned victory in the second race, the 2:25 trot, yesterday afternoon, at the Parkway Driving Club's Summer meeting, the event being the final of a three days' programme. Five heats were necessary to determine the winner. Quisetta won the first two heats in easy fashion. Then came the surprise. Admorell, who had finished fifth and third, respectively, in the two succeeding heats, challenged the Harriman entry and finished first in a close race. The next heat also went to the credit of Admorell by about a length, Quisetta finishing seventh. In the final heat Admorell and Quisetta raced close together until the stretch, where Admorell broke badly, and after being pulled down broke again. Quisetta went on and won by a length.

Max Karpf's Ulrich captured the first race, the 2:22 pace, in straight heats. The summary:

THE INCOME TAX THREAT.

Justice BREWER never speaks without saying something that shows sturdiness and originality of thought. He is no man's echo, and the fad of the moment is tested on true and tried principles before it gets his approval. Thus he belongs to that small but growing class which finds itself against its will in opposition to the policies of both ROOSEVELT and TAFT. There is no standard worthy the name which condemns a proposal from one man which does not condemn the same proposal from another. We have fallen too much into the way of passing bad laws and trusting to neglect of them to remedy the evils from their operation. We have been told that the income tax will be harmless while TAFT is President, and we are providing him with new and disputatious laws to enforce, although he has not as yet remedied the demonstrated inefficiency of administration of existing laws which characterized his predecessor. It is the things which he has not done which entitle him to the greatest praise.

The income tax is both his most positive suggestion, and also the one which brings his Administration into closest comparison with Mr. ROOSEVELT's. Thus Mr. ROOSEVELT's Secretary of the Interior, Mr. GARFIELD, speaking on the same day as Justice BREWER, said of the corporation income tax that it indicates Mr. TAFT's > decision to stand by the Roosevelt policies in so far as they relate to corporate interests. The institution of this tax must carry with it greater and more far-reaching powers of investigation than have ever been enjoyed heretofore by the Government. Without such powers the bill would be worthless.

As it chances, Justice BREWER selected for criticism the very qualities which commend it to Mr. GARFIELD. It is the Federal inquisition into State affairs, and control of them, which President TAFT proposes, Justice BREWER condemns, and Mr. GARFIELD selects for special praise. President TAFT is putting into practical operation Secretary ROOT's threat that the National Government would exercise the powers which the States neglected, and Justice BREWER dissents. Plainly the taxpayers are doubly burdened, or else the resources of the States are reduced if they waive the income tax which the Nation takes. Corporations which might endure either tax might be oppressed by a double tax, and thus the Nation could starve to death institutions created by the States. But, as Justice BREWER says, to cripple a State's resources is to assume "power to tax the States, not out of their existence, but out of their vitality."

Even more admirable are Justice BREWER's remarks upon Federal debt increase, which apply equally to our city finances. The characteristic of the spendthrift tendency of both city and National finance is the inability of those conducting affairs to realize that a borrowed dollar and an earned dollar are the same thing. It is only just being realized that the Panama Canal is costing real money. It is not stage money which is being disbursed on the Isthmus. It is true capital, and there is no objection to treating it as capital, with shifting of the burden to those who will have the benefits. But assuredly the burden would have been less lightly taken up if it had been necessary for those who spend the money to raise the taxes. Mr. ROOSEVELT's army and navy extravagances would have been checked if it had been necessary for him to raise their cost, and now Mr. TAFT finds war taxes necessary in times of peace to recoup a Treasury approaching embarrassment.

SPANISH SKIRMISHES IN MOROCCO.

The Spanish youths who were found in the trenches around Santiago de Cuba in the Summer of 1898 with American rifle bullets in their brains did not sacrifice their lives in vain. Their mothers are now vehemently protesting against their younger brothers being sent to vindicate Spanish honor in Morocco.

It is an unfortunate affair. Several thousand Mauser rifles with ammunition brought back to Spain at the close of the Spanish-American war were sent to Melilla on the urgent request of the Governor of that fortress, Gen. MARGALLO. MARGALLO found it profitable to dispose of these rifles to the Moorish tribes inhabiting the country between Taza and Fez. These arms played no small part in the recent attempts of the Moors to prevent the French from carrying out the terms of the Algeciras Conference, although French newspapers hinted at the time that the Mausers had come from Germans.

However, the culpability of Gen. MARGALLO is beyond doubt; and MARGALLO himself has been killed by the very rifles he sold. But those who bought them are loth to give them up, just as they are loth to acknowledge Spanish sovereignty over the territory where they pitched their tents during Winter, notwithstanding the fact that their ancestral chiefs acknowledged that sovereignty in the seventeenth century.

There is slight danger of the Moors capturing Melilla, for it is a fortified town, built on a rocky peninsula, and connected by lines of rampart with Fort Rosario on the heights behind. Indeed, the whole vicinity is studded with fortifications, which, although obsolete as regards modern artillery, are impervious to modern rifle fire. What Spain needs there is a few batteries of machine guns and a Kitchener. That would end the trouble in short order. The present policy of sending infantry regiments of Spanish youths to the troubled territory means a useless sacrifice of young lives and an interminable prolongation of hostilities.

THE THAW PAMPHLET.

The publication of a pamphlet signed by the mother of H. K. THAW, who, having murdered a fellow-being, escaped the death penalty on the ground of insanity, and is now trying to secure freedom on the plea that he is sane, caps the climax. The Thaw case from the beginning has been revolting to the sense of justice. The dignity of the law has suffered through the conduct of the case. The pamphlet now published pictures "an average young man, with a chivalrous nature," hounded and persecuted by "a cowardly combination made up of men of professional standing, together with disappointed blackmailers, perjurers, and others." The personal attacks it contains on the District Attorney, who conducted the murder trial for the people and the trial Judge are not only unwarranted, they are so utterly false and indecent as to make the reader forget they are ostensibly the utterances of a mother half distracted by the peril of her son. The public utterances of the mother of CARLYLE HARRIS were bad enough, but in that case the woman honestly believed that her erring son was guiltless of deliberate murder. Few persons will believe that this ill-considered attack on the courts was really penned by the widow of WILLIAM THAW, though her name is signed to it.

The "miserable degenerates" seeking to avenge STANFORD WHITE are purely imaginary. It has been said that THAW's attorneys objected to the publication of this pamphlet. But they permitted its publication, and must bear their share of responsibility for it in the opinion of the public. The theory that THAW is confined to the end that certain damaging facts about other persons can be concealed is preposterous. The conduct of the Thaw case has caused the wide publication of only too many damaging facts, and much dubious testimony of a vicious character.

VIRGINIA'S TWO STATUES.

Without once meaning to do so, Virginia, which bore the heat and burden of the war between the States, is soon to test the quality of the better understanding and growing fraternal spirit between the North and the South.

The Virginia Legislature has had prepared for presentation to the Federal Government the statues of two of the Old Dominion's illustrious sons, GEORGE WASHINGTON and ROBERT E. LEE. The statue of WASHINGTON, a bronze reproduction inch for inch of the Houdon figure in the State Capitol at Richmond, regarded by many as the most precious piece of marble in this country, since it is the only existing statue of the First President made from life, is now in this city awaiting shipment to Washington. That of LEE, cast from a model by the Richmond sculptor, EDWARD V. VALENTINE, from measurements which he himself made shortly before the Southern leader's death, has just come from the foundry.

Both statues will be presented early in the coming Winter, when Congress reassembles in regular session, with the understanding, which the Virginia commission has determined to put forward as delicately as possible but firmly, that the National rejection of one will be construed to mean the refusal of both and the continued vacancy, as far as the State is concerned, of that section in Statuary Hall allotted to Virginia.

This attitude, according to a member of the Commission, was never intended as a threat or to force a recognition of LEE by the National Government, but simply grew out of the dissension arising when Virginia decided to offer LEE's as one of the two statues to which by invitation she was freely entitled. From the point of view of a Virginian, it is argued, the State could not have made any other selection and be honest. Perhaps no man but a Virginian can quite understand the full measure of affection, little short of idolatry, with which LEE is everywhere in his State regarded. Notwithstanding the Virginian's unaffected admiration of JEFFERSON's statesmanship and prophetic vision, which made him a Saul among his contemporaries in the constructive period of his country's history, the figures of WASHINGTON and LEE stand out before the Virginian as the foremost characters his State has produced—WASHINGTON the finest product of the hardy Colonial civilization, the Colony merging into the life of the State when his greatness was at its height; LEE the ultimate personal expression of that other chivalric epoch which closed with the surrender at Appomattox.

Though many even in Virginia thought at one time that the offer of LEE's statue would be ill-advised, as it was capable of being misconstrued, and though here and there a Grand Army of the Republic post has uttered a protest, few if any now doubt that the statue will be accepted in the spirit offered.

THE AMERICAN EXILE.

From Newport comes the intelligence that some wealthy Americans do prefer exile in Europe because of the publicity given to personal affairs of wealthy people in American newspapers. Any American who prefers exile on that account is entitled to all the obscurity he can find in foreign lands. All the same, he can easily keep his name out of print here, if he cares to. Other reasons given for preferring life in Europe are the cheapness of living, and the beneficial climates. The mysterious American millionaire who told The London Daily Mail why he esteemed London as a "social centre" said nothing of the cheapness of living there. It is far from cheap.

Some Americans with slender means, who are incapable of increasing their incomes by useful labor, or are unwilling to work, dwell cheaply in French, Italian, and German cities. They do not help to make those cities American social centres. They may enjoy a fair share of material comfort, but nobody knows them, and they are generally persons of low vitality and little ambition. Often they are decent, cleanly, well-educated folks, entitled to sympathy in their exile.

To talk about the cheapness of life abroad, in comparison with life in this country, is to get far away from The Daily Mail's argument. Cheap Americans are not particularly wanted in London or anywhere else in Europe. The welcome American visitor is one who scatters dollars where the native gingerly bestows "thrippences," who pays double fares for his cabs, travels "first class," occupies "suites de luxe," and spends thousands of dollars on his dinner parties. Visitors of this kind make London a sort of dubious American social centre in Summer for the smart gentlemen who get up public dinners to influence the action of our State Department, who have splendid financial schemes to promote, who are continually forming new American clubs with initiation fees twice as high as those of the Pall Mall clubs. But quiet, well-bred traveling Americans generally shun them.

One drawback American visitors find in England in these days of international sports is the sullen, ugly mood of English crowds when competitors from abroad are the winners. The typical underbred Englishman is splendidly sportsmanlike when he is winning. But he is a spoiled child when he loses. Polite words after the event are all very well, but every American who happens to be in England when a winning American team is booed or frowned upon feels the slight.

The beneficial climates of Europe scarcely need be sought on their own account by the inhabitant of a continent which has every climate to be found elsewhere in the world, and a few more its very own. We have thermal springs equal to the best in the world, scenery unsurpassed, mountain and valley and seashore, semi-tropical lands, and a domain stretching northward into the arctic. Nevertheless travel in Europe, properly undertaken, is beneficial alike to mind and body. The good American, when he can afford it, sees all the world. But his "social centre" is here.

THE DECEASED WIFE'S SISTER AGAIN.

Since the English Deceased Wife's Sister act, which permits a widower to marry his sister-in-law, went into force in August, 1907, there have been several conflicts between the new measure and the law of the Established Church, which forbids such a marriage. These conflicts have been brought about by ministers who declined to perform such marriages or to receive at Holy Communion persons who had been so united. When the parties so deprived of their legal rights have appealed to the ecclesiastical authorities, these authorities have invariably shown that they were willing to allow the ecclesiastical law to be interpreted in accordance with the law of the State, of which it automatically—in theory at least—had become a part. The clergymen, therefore, who declined to unite in marriage a deceased wife's sister with her brother-in-law, or to receive them at communion after marriage, were reproved and ordered to comply with the law of the land.

But there were many ministers whose consciences would not permit them to accept this ruling, although it conformed with the principle of an Established Church—as much as anything could be made to conform with so obvious an anomaly. Consequently, means have been sought to preserve the consciences of Conservative clergymen, and at the same time guard them against an infraction of the Deceased Wife's Sister law.

To change the wording of "The Book of Common Prayer" was an expedient too complicated and radical to be thought of. The next best thing has been done. At the annual meeting of the Representative Church Council at Church House, Westminster, under the Presidency of the Archbishop of Canterbury, a resolution was carried by a large majority of the ecclesiastical and lay members present, which reads as follows:

> That, seeing that all marriages within the prohibited degrees of affinity (whether allowed by the law of the land or not) are wrong as being contrary to the moral rule of the Church of England and the principles implied in Holy Scripture as interpreted by it, the use of the Prayer Book's service for the solemnisation of holy matrimony in respect of any such marriage is most strongly to be reprobated.

But, suppose a deceased wife's sister and her brother-in-law appear before a clergyman and demand to be married by the Prayer Book. Suppose he declines to comply with this demand, and they lay their case before the ecclesiastical authorities, what will then be the result? The occurrence of such a case is awaited with interest.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Conditions of Success in Alaska.

When Mr. DANIEL GUGGENHEIM, in a recent interview, advised young men to go to Alaska as the land which to-day offers more opportunities than any other for the ambitious seeker after fortune and advancement, his account of the conditions and possibilities existing there may have owed much of its glow and warmth to the fact that his railway and mining enterprises in the Far North would not suffer if cheaper labor were abundant there. Still, advice may be good, even though not entirely disinterested, and the number of letters which his remarks have brought us show plainly enough that would-be frontiersmen still abound in the United States.

The recklessness of other days, however, is now wanting, and people ask more questions than formerly before venturing into the wilds, especially as to the amount of money which the Argonaut must possess when he starts if he is to have a fair chance of success in his adventure. The correspondence has seemingly turned into a discussion of this one problem, with the assertion of a man who spoke from experience, that $1,000 in hand on arrival was the least that anybody should have, serving as the point about which the controversy revolves. An equally well-informed writer whose letter we printed yesterday, while denying that any such sum was necessary, or more, indeed, than a few dollars over the cost of the journey north, probably hit on the real secret of success or failure when he said that he landed in Alaska with an almost empty pocket, but had been brought up in the Far West, was familiar with mining, and, "above all," knew how to rough it and still survive.

It is easily comprehensible that those qualifications would well supply the place of money for the man who possessed them, but for those who have them not the caution as to the dangers of pennilessness in Alaska is doubtless sound. Mining is a business in which experience counts as it does in others, and the young man with an Eastern, and especially with an urban, training, would be rash who went to Alaska without enough money to save him from hardship, and perhaps from starvation, while he was learning how to live in that unkindly country. It is now a land that rewards combined rather than individual effort, and there are no more fortunes to be picked up on the beach.

Galveston Safe from Storm.

While it is evident from the reports that Wednesday's storm at Galveston was less severe than that which wrecked the city and killed so many of its inhabitants nine years ago, evidently the disturbance was a hurricane of considerable violence and quite strong enough to have done an enormous amount of damage had not the lesson of the great disaster been so well learned and had not effective measures been taken to prevent its repetition.

While Galveston lay in ruins there was serious talk among the survivors of abandoning the low sand bar on which the city had been built and of starting a new one on the other side of the lagoon. Those, however, were only the counsels of a momentary discouragement, and when the advantages and the disadvantages of the old site had been duly considered it was decided that the immediate and future costs and inconveniences of removal to the mainland were so great that it would be better to fight with the sea for the possession of the island. So the city rose again where the necessities and opportunities of commerce had decided that it ought to be, but incidentally its people—with a lot of help from the State of Texas and not a little from the Federal Government—built a huge stone wall to fend off the waves of the ever-threatening Gulf, and behind it they filled in with sand, and more sand, till the grade of almost the whole town had been raised many feet.

The work done has now been tested and found not wanting. Galveston suffered less, rather than more, from this week's storm than other cities would have done from winds of like velocity, and, though the waves topped the wall and flooded some of the streets, the city has the best of reasons now for calm confidence in the protection which the engineers have given it.

A somewhat amusing feature of the episode is the care with which the Weather Bureau is calling public attention to the fact that it gave due warning of the storm's approach. Whether it did so or not in 1900 has been a much-discussed question, with those having the best of the argument who say that, though a warning was given, it was not of a sort to arouse any particular fear or to cause the taking of unusual precautions. This time there is no doubt that the bureau announced the coming of a real hurricane, which it had spotted afar off in the Caribbean, and that anybody who wanted to run away had a chance to do so. Therefore the bureau scores one on its critics.

For Better Music.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We are certainly plagued with far too much cheap, worthless music. There is so much keen enjoyment in really good music. All that is necessary is to familiarize the great mass of the people with it by having the excellent concert cafe gardens of Berlin and Chicago—yes, Chicago here, or the small "salles de musiques" of Paris, where one can hear Schubert, Saint-Saens, and Rubenstein for a small fee.

GERMAN EXPORTERS.

Laws of Hamburg Do Not Protect Foreigners Against Dishonest Merchants.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Under title, "German Nobles Grill Americans," you publish some German sentiment against American business methods.

It is true enough that our corporation laws are much too loose and much swindling is done under their protection. Educated foreigners should know that as well as we know it here.

Individual and corporation custom in commerce is, however, more honest and easygoing in the United States than in Europe. It is the exception and not the rule that claims are made in ordinary commercial transactions, and an immense amount of business is transacted by word of mouth and full payments made without a single written word except the invoice itself.

It is unfortunately true that our importers suffer constantly from swindle and misrepresentation from abroad. In Germany swindle against foreigners has been brought down to a fine system. The German manufacturer makes two grades of goods, one for home consumption of good, honest quality, and one for export. The merchant sells at a low price for export, cash against documents, guaranteeing certain quality. They get the order, ship the goods, get paid against delivery of shipping documents. In many cases the goods are not up to the guarantee and the American importer cannot use the goods.

Then follows the usual long drawn out correspondence, and finally the American victim decides to sue for his money. The purchase is often made in Hamburg, whence shipment was made. The case is now brought home to Hamburg, but the victim is told that it is "outlawed." I have had several cases of such swindles, and when I brought my case to a well-known Hamburg firm of lawyers I was told that in six months all claims were outlawed—for foreigners. It cost me 40 marks to be told of the fact, the lawyer only looking over my case for a few minutes.

It will, therefore, be seen, providing the law firm was not a joke, that the good old City of Hamburg has made laws apparently for the purpose of giving protection to export swindlers. Thousands of American importers suffer under this cruel and unjust Hamburg law, providing it exists. I can hardly think that the lawyers have sunk so low as to be in league with the exporters.

DUTY ON GLOVES.

Objects to a Schedule Said to be Dear to Speaker Cannon.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I see by your special Washington dispatch this morning that Speaker Cannon "holds much to heart the rates on gloves which were inserted in the Payne bill chiefly on the representations of ex-Representative Littauer." This is no doubt quite correct, and in using his influence to the benefit of this iniquitous glove schedule the Speaker disregards entirely the promises of a downward revision that were made by the party to which he belongs. What matters a little thing like party promises of the G. O. P. between friends like Speaker Cannon and ex-Representative Littauer if the honorable Speaker is in debt for favors to the glove manufacturer? Mr. Cannon may not be a tariff expert, but it needs not an expert to know that the present rates of duty are high enough to comply with Mr. Taft's rule laid down for the tariff revision; i. e., to equalize the difference in the cost of manufacture of goods made here and those made in foreign countries and to add enough for a reasonable profit for the home industry. Some rates are higher than this. Take for instance women's cape gloves, prix seam, with a dutiable embroidered back, the duty is now $3.30 a dozen, and the domestic manufacturer has the business in this style in the hollow of his hand, and it is a large business, but the domestic manufacturer has a large hand.

The proposed duty on this style in the Payne bill is $4.80 per dozen. Again, the domestic manufacturers could dispense with the cumulative duty and still have the business on this style of glove, so why do they want to add $1.50 a dozen? Is it to give it to their workmen, or would it go into the pockets of the domestic manufacturer?

If you can tell us what we are going to do about it, Mr. Editor, do.

EDUCATED CARP.

The Sad Fate of a Very Remarkable Fish.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Once More the Carp" in to-day's TIMES, and the discussion as to whether it is edible or not, brings to mind an article read four or five years ago in a German scientific magazine in the library of Dartmouth College. This is the story, which was given as true:

A gentleman living in England had been very much impressed by having seen at a show or circus "educated" or trained seals. It occurred to him that if seals were trained to do the things he saw them do fish might be trained, too.

He experimented with various kinds of fish for a long period of time without success, until one day he thought perhaps the carp might be taught something, for he thought it was not fit to eat.

After repeated efforts and many failures, he finally succeeded in training a carp to follow him within prescribed limits over his lawn.

One day, experimenting further, he essayed to cross (the carp following) a little rustic bridge that spanned a little stream that ran through his grounds. All went well until, when about midway, the carp fell in the water—and was drowned.

Care for Sick Babies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A few more sick babies can be cared for at the Junior Sea Breeze Summer Hospital, at Sixty-fourth Street and the East River, and we should be glad to have any of your readers refer or bring to the hospital sick children under two years of age whose parents cannot afford to pay for proper treatment.

The hospital, made possible by the generosity of John D. Rockefeller, and conducted by the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, is admirably located for the care of sick babies during the Summer months. Situated on a bluff, high above the East River, the hospital buildings are so arranged that the children get as much cool, fresh air as if they were out of doors in the country.

There is no charge for caring for the babies, who may remain in the hospital until they are cured. Facilities like these should be constantly used to their fullest capacity, and it would be most regrettable if any baby, needing Junior Sea Breeze, should be deprived of the opportunity of recovering health and strength merely because of ignorance of the opportunity offered.

Application for admittance can be made any time by letter or in person at the hospital. Where mothers cannot bring their babies to the hospital, a visiting nurse will be sent to the babies' homes.

The Passing of Venice.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am sorry to see that the motor boat is encroaching on the gondola in Venice, if only for the reason that our lighter literature may be bereft of that charming description of the city by Mrs. Newrich, who said "Venice is an awfully funny place. They haven't any cabs, you know, because the streets are full of water, and you have to hire a chandelier and he rows you about in a dongola."

I fear, too, that the odor of "petrol" may lessen the ecstasy of the fair American tourist who wrote home to her friends, "The scenery here is too fine for words! I sit on the Grand Canal and drink it all in."

ILLNESS HOLDS STRAUS BACK.

Ambassador to Turkey Won't Be Able to Go to Post Until Aug. 15.

Oscar S. Straus, Ambassador to Turkey, who was stricken with appendicitis just as he was about to sail for Europe, has written to Secretary of State Knox that he expects to be able to leave for his post about Aug. 15, arriving in Constantinople in the first week in September.

Ambassador Straus had expected to sail on July 6, but appendicitis developed, and he had to undergo an operation, though his house had been closed and a part of his baggage already sent aboard the steamer. As soon as Dr. Brewer, his physician, determined that an operation was necessary, a friend put at his disposal an apartment in his home, 10 West Sixty-first Street, and Mr. Straus was removed there.

Secretary Knox extended the time of Ambassador Straus's departure to July 29, and Mr. Straus expected until a day or so ago to sail on next Tuesday, but his physician has informed him that he would endanger his life if he should undertake an ocean trip before the middle of August.

Mr. Straus succeeds Ambassador Leishman, who has been transferred to Rome. This will be Mr. Straus's second period of diplomatic service in Turkey, he having been the United States's representative at the Turkish capital in the last Administration of Cleveland and the first of McKinley.

LONG TESTS OF WIRELESS

Will Be Made with Apparatus for the Great Washington Tower.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Tests with the apparatus that is to be installed in the great 1,000-foot wireless tower to be erected here will begin some time next week at Brant's Rock, Mass. The specifications drawn by the Navy Department provide that it shall be sufficiently strong to send and receive messages over a radius of 3,000 miles. The company which got the contract has proceeded with its testing tower to a point where the apparatus can be installed within the next few days.

Lieut. G. C. Sweet of the Bureau of Equipment has just returned from Brant's Rock, and reported to-day to the department the progress of the work. The wireless apparatus is to be the most powerful yet turned out by any concern, and its ability to transmit messages over the great distance required of it is yet to be proved. As quickly as its ability is demonstrated work on the construction of the big tower here will begin.

CASSIDY WILL AID HUGHES.

Ex-Senator Ready to Champion the Direct Primaries Bill.

ITHACA, N. Y., July 22.—Owen Cassidy, who was defeated for renomination as State Senator last Fall because of his vote against the Race Track Gambling bills, is out in favor of direct nominations, and will speak this Fall in this and other counties on the primary question. Mr. Cassidy was believed to be an implacable opponent of Gov. Hughes, but declares this was erroneous, and that although there are several features about the Governor's Primary bill of which he does not approve, he is still ready to accept it.

Senator Cassidy, who has been practicing law at Watkins for the last year, has regained his health, and expects to get back into politics. He declared here that it was too early to say what part he expected to take.

SCIENCE OF FAITH.

Thinks This Satisfactorily Explains the Cures of Supposed Miracles.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Among the editorials in your paper of July 21 an article headed "Supposed Miracles," by E. J. H., caught my eye, and the statement "that cures were real and science would some day know why.",

It seems to me we need not wait for "some day," for we ought to see and know to-day "why." "Faith" is the cure. The cure is of a diseased mind, and proves the "supremacy of mind over matter." It seems so clear to me that all the troubles and sorrows, sicknesses and ills of life are nothing more than stumbling blocks in our path, and are put there to make us stop and think and ask ourselves whether we are applying the teachings of the Bible to our daily needs, and are being fed from the "tree of life," and have in us the faith, the mind that was in Christ Jesus.

So I feel and know that we do not need any future science to teach and show us, for we have found that science to-day, and that with that "Science of Faith" there is no condition, organic or inorganic, that cannot be cured to-day. That is the science that our friend E. J. H. could evidently not see and left the future to find.

Lexington Avenue Stations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Reading in this morning's issue of your paper the tentative location of the stations on the Lexington Avenue route, may I make the humble suggestion that they quite overlooked the many merchants who live on Carnegie Hill, as we call it up here, in that the last station would be Eighty-sixth Street and the next Ninety-sixth Street, which is a veritable tenement district? I would humbly suggest that they remove the Eighty-sixth Street station to Eighty-fifth Street, with an entrance at Eighty-sixth Street, and place the new station at Ninetieth Street, as that is an entrance to Central Park. Then remove the Ninety-sixth Street station to 106th Street, as that is also an entrance to the Park; also in view of the fact that they have a station at Twenty-third Street and another at Twenty-eighth Street, which is only a difference of five blocks.

National Emblems.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is noted among your lines that in a few weeks Uncle Sam will have issued a new design on the one-cent pieces. Why not start a crusade to have "Old Glory" made into something different. A green stripe and a black stripe might appeal to a large proportion of our inhabitants. Since all sentiment and value of what might be termed our trade marks have vanished, it is time to take a step toward changing our National emblem.

A REVOLUTIONIST.

TO A BEETLE.

A beetle is a little bug for modest bearing noted,
Its rounded form is builded snug and with no venom bloated.
No insect ever flew so low for happiness and pleasure
Nor seemed so innocent; but, oh, we have, at last, its measure!

We never saunter to the shade for afternoon siesta
Because this little beast seems made to plague us and to pester.
He's in our shoe or down our back or scrambling o'er our faces,
And now and then he gives a crack and 'round our ear rim chases.

He wanders idly through our hair and on our topknot lingers;
We feel his scratchy footsteps there, likewise his sticky fingers.
We dare not hit the brute a whack for fear our heads would suffer,
And he—he knows it well, alack, and just hangs on! The duffer!

The beetle is a natty bug and goodness knows I wot it!
But drat its satisfaction smug! I'd like to up and swat it!
I do not mind its looking through my pockets or my stocking;
But this, for any bug, should do, and more is simply shocking!

No Evidence of Political Jobbery, His Counsel Says, but Accusers Declare Haffen Is Discredited.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, July 22.—Gov. Hughes returned from Saranac Lake this morning and listened the greater part of the afternoon to arguments for and against the removal of Borough President Louis F. Haffen of the Bronx. The hearing was upon the report of Commissioner MacFarlane, who found grounds for Haffen's removal, but thought that perhaps the Governor might delay action because of the approach of a city election.

The Governor informed the attorneys and Mr. Haffen that he would leave tomorrow for Seattle and the Alaska-Yukon Exposition, and would not return to Albany until the middle of August, when he would immediately take up the charges against the Borough President, and make his decision. The Governor said:

"Considerations of political expediency are not regarded as relevant; the question being on the proof submitted of the truth of the charges."

This statement of his position came at the conclusion of the hearing. Protest had been made against the suggestion that because Haffen's term of office would be up soon he might be left to serve it out. It was also said that failure to act on the charges would have an influence on the municipal election, because it would be held that the charges had not been proved.

Borough President Haffen appeared at the hearing with his counsel, Louis O. Van Doren and ex-Judge Morgan J. O'Brien. To support the charges made by the Bronx Civic League, the City Club, and the Merchants' Association there appeared John Purroy Mitchel, Commissioner of Accounts; Arthur C. Train, Mr. Birkherd of the Citizens' Union, Raymond Ingersoll of the Committee of One Hundred, President McAneny of the City Club, and Henry Bruere of the Bureau of Municipal Research.

Attorney Van Doren said that of the twenty-two charges made against President Haffen all but three had been dismissed by Commissioner MacFarland. Mr. Van Doren held that there was no proof of political jobbery in the Bronx Court House matter, as President Haffen was wholly within his rights. As to his owning stock in an improvement company having property along the Clason's Point Road, which the President decided to improve, the lawyers argued that the other owners petitioned for the improvement, and that no evidence had been presented to show that his ownership influenced his official action.

On the point of Haffen's responsibility for the taking of Hunt's Point Park and for establishing a bathing place there, Mr. Van Doren declared the Borough President alone should not be condemned of all the city officials concerned in the making of this park. The fitness of the site for a bathing place was not properly involved in this charge, he asserted, and should not be turned into a proceeding in order to force Haffen's removal.

Ex-Justice Morgan J. O'Brien made a brief argument on the law involved in the case. He characterized Haffen as an honest man against whose integrity or character no evidence and no proof worthy of consideration had been presented. It was unwarranted and despicable to stigmatize him as a perjurer, Mr. O'Brien said, or as a mere politician in the absence of all proofs. Mr. Haffen had been twenty years in the public service and was still a poor man; there was nothing in the charges indicating that any public money had been lost.

Arguments in support of the charges were presented, first by John Purroy Mitchel, who declared that misfeasance in office was proved in the charges involving the carrying of numbers of unnecessary employes wrongfully on the payrolls of the department. He declared that the principle set forth in the Ahearn case alone warranted removal, and protested against delaying removal on account of the impending political contest.

Mr. Mitchel denounced the specification of granite from an obscure quarry for the Bronx Court House as political jobbery. He ridiculed the selection of the Hunt's Point Park as a bathing place based on an alleged current which Haffen asserted carried away all the sewage from the small beach. Nobody else ever heard of this current, he said. The scheme of the city government held the borough president responsible in a case involving the selection of a public park.

Arthur C. Train spoke for the various civic bodies making the charges. He asserted that the evidence submitted in regard to the construction of the Clason's Point Road and the enhancement of the value of a realty company in which Haffen held stock showed that the borough president had been in a corrupt scheme which alone called for his removal.

"Mr. Van Doren asks for evidence of political jobbery," said Mr. Train. "He has it in the action of the borough president who buys land in a public highway which he expects to have improved. Haffen initiated a public improvement to benefit himself and his friends. If he did this he is not a fit man to hold office in the city of New York, and if you, Mr. Governor, failed to remove him you would not be doing your full duty."

Mr. Train also accused Mr. Haffen of perjuring himself when he testified regarding his ownership of stock in the realty companies on the Clason's Point Road. He denied owning any real estate, Mr. Train said, until other evidence and the stock book of the Sound View Realty Company were produced showing the contrary. It was also pointed out that the petition for the improvement was in the handwriting of the chief engineer of Haffen's office.

"Your Excellency cannot do anything else," said Mr. Train, "than to discredit the testimony of several of the witnesses, particularly the testimony of Borough President Louis F. Haffen."

He urged the Governor to act as early as possible.

"If this man is not removed," he said, "it will be the strongest argument in favor of his re-election. The Civic League of the Bronx has tried for years to get a hearing to show that Haffen is corrupt and isn't fit to occupy the position he now holds. I say that a man who can commit perjury as Louis F. Haffen has done is not a proper man to hold office."

Raymond V. Ingersoll, for the Committee of One Hundred, also joined in the protest against the suggestion that the nearness to the election might operate to make unnecessary Mr. Haffen's removal at this time.

"We call your attention," said he, "to the nature of the charges. They have to do largely with the use of public resources and the machinery of public office for partisan political ends, a course for which the opportunities and temptation are greater at the time of an important election than at any other time. It is at the time of an election, above all other times, that the great office of Borough President should be in hands free from any disposition to so use its far-reaching powers as to improperly influence the result.

"Charges are made that Mr. Haffen has used his relationships with contractors for the purpose of securing campaign contributions from them and of gaining support for a political association which he controls; that he has juggled the payrolls so as to make special provision for his political supporters. It is charged that for political support he has paid with city money, and this amounts to taking campaign contributions out of the public treasury. In this connection particular regard may be had to the statement of Commissioner Macfarlane on the thirteenth charge, that 'enough has been disclosed to show that the respondent has in this matter subordinated his duty as a public official to his political friendships and his personal interests.'"

WATSON HORSES WIN AT BAYSHORE SHOW

SOCIETY OUT IN FORCE

Opening Day's Exhibition Attracts Many Prominent Persons from Long Island Summer and Hunting Colonies.

Fresh from international honors, C. W. Watson's high-stepping horses made a clean sweep of the harness classes yesterday at the first day of the ninth annual exhibition of the Bayshore Horse Show Association at Oakwood Driving Park, Long Island. The success scored by the hirses from Fairmont Farm emphasized the judgment of the judges at the London Olympia Show, and, despite the fact that the horses have scarcely recovered from their long sea journey, they showed superior form in every class in which they were entered.

The principal victory of the day was that of Kitty Grey and Norena in the class, the best pair of harness horses, for the Blue Book Challenge Cup. The conditions called for women to drive, and Mrs. C. W. Watson, one of the most expert whips in the country, sat in the phaeton. The award was a popular one, and Mrs. Watson was loudly cheered as she drove around the ring after receiving the blue ribbon. As the cup was won by the Fairmont Stable last year, it becomes the absolute property of Mr. Watson. Ringing Bells, which was also driven by Mrs. Watson, won the premier award in the harness-horse class, while Kitty Grey and Norena duplicated their London Olympia performance by capturing the tandem class.

The exhibition was the leading Summer event of the North Shore of the Long Island colony, and attracted many of the best horses now being shown in the Horse Show circuit. Although the entries are not quite up to the number of former years, the quality more than compensated for this.

The boxes and parking spaces presented an attractive appearance, while the grand stand was comfortably filled. Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Watson entertained a box party consisting of Miss Margaret Ward of Charlotte, West Va.; Miss Sue Watson, and Miss Katherine of Fairmont, West Va. Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hubbs had their two daughters. Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Blum chaperoned a big box party, including Miss Edna Chapman, Miss Hilda Chapman, Miss Kathleen Webster, Miss Doris Webster, and Miss Margaret Du Mary. Mr. and Mrs. Simon F. Rothschild entertained a number of friends, including Mrs. F. Bailey and Master Howard Rothschild. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hyde and the Misses Lulu and Lily Hyde occupied a box. Mr. and Mrs. Bradish Johnson also had a box party of young friends, as did Mr. and Mrs. John D. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Knapp, Mr. and Mrs. John McNamee, Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Jones, Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer, Mrs. J. Roosevelt, Mrs. J. Benjamin Weeks, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ellis, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. Mollenhauer, Mr. and Mrs. Jay F. Carlisle, and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Gibb.

Many of the members of the Summer colony of the North Shore of Long Island were on hand, a number of them reaching the horse show grounds in automobiles and other vehicles. The hunting colonies of Meadow Brook, Cedarhurst, Rockaway, and Great Neck were well represented.

The People Who Were There.

Among those present were:

Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Winchester Rouss, Charles A. Baudouine, Mr. and Mrs. Hastings Arnold, Sidney Holloway, Mrs. Frank Winterbottom, Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. McGrann, Charles Holloway, Alfred B. Maclay, Thomas Adams, Jr., Lawrence Abrahams, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Brinckerhoff, Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Bachea, R. Lawrence Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Rokenbaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Pinkerton, Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Owens, Mr. and Mrs. J. Adolph Mollenhauer, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Lemmerman, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Lester, Mr. and Mrs. John Bossert, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob P. Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Jay F. Carlisle, Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Dick, Mr. and Mrs. H. Beekman Delatour, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Ellis, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Lewis M. Gibb, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hollins, Joseph Larocque, Mr. and Mrs. E. Middleton Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McGibbon, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holloway, James Fox, H. V. Bell, Mrs. Frederick Dedrich, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Wharton, Mrs. Sophie D. Gummey, Mrs. Howard Boocock, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Davis, Miss Electra Havemeyer, Miss Frances O. Lemmerman, Mrs. L. A. Percival, James A. Renwick, Tonzo Sauvage, Miss Eloise Sherin, A. Lincoln Stadler, Miss Margaret Whitney, Miss Frances Lincoln, Miss Sadie People, Miss Rita Carson, Miss Florence Lloyd, Miss M. P. Zietz, Miss Edna Young, and Miss Margaret Fitzgerald.

The maiden harness horse class brought out a big field of high-class entries, and the competition was unusually keen. The winner turned up in Lehman Strauss's stylish acting gray gelding Juno, with Miss Margaret S. Whitney's bay gelding Judge second. The maiden saddle horse class went to Mrs. Howard Boocock's black gelding Muffin.

There was little doubt as to the winner of the harness horse class for horses over 14.1 hands. Mrs. C. W. Watson made her first appearance in the ring since her return from the London Horse Show, and so well did she handle the chestnut mare Ringing Bells that she was almost unanimously conceded the blue ribbon. George Watson's Rifle did not show his accustomed action, while Kitty Grey lacked her usual sharp, decisive step. These horses were placed second and third respectively. Kitty Grey, however, showed to better advantage when driven with Norena as a pair by Mrs. Watson in the ladies' class for the Blue Book Challenge Cup, and captured the trophy outright. The class was small but select, and Mrs. Watson's driving materially contributed to the pair's victory.

Miss Margaret S. Whitney's chestnut gelding Marksman won the ladies' saddle class in handsome style. Joseph Larocque's Somerset captured the second ribbon.

Two jumping classes were decided. In the first event for ponies Miss Electra Havemeyer's chestnut gelding Tark was adjudged the winner. The jumping class for horses brought out over a score of timber toppers, and so keen was the competition that it required nearly an hour and a half to determine the winner. Lord Dodo, entered by the Pontiac Stables, and Allan Pinkerton's Highball were the only entries to make a clean record. The former did the cleanest work and received the premier award.

Competition in the harness horse class for the get of registered hackneys was very keen. The judging narrowed down to Mr. Watson's Ringing Bells and Kitty Grey, and R. P. McGrann's Tinker Bell. The final award went to Ringing Bells, with Tinker Bell second and Kitty Grey third. Mayo, formerly the property of Mrs. John Gerken, won the combination class for her new owner, the Somerset Farms, and Tonzo Sauvage captured first and second prizes for the runabout class with Grand Duke and Lord Nelson, respectively.

ROCKAWAY HUNT HAS A YACHT CLUB ANNEX

EBEN STEVENS COMMODORE

Special to The New York Times.

CEDARHURST, L. I., July 22.—The Rockaway Hunt Club has been enjoying for the last few weeks a huge houseboat anchored off the pier at Lawrence, L. I., where, quite secluded, the members have all the advantages of yacht club life with the added benefit of being able to move their clubhouse at will. The idea of a yacht club for the Rockaway members, with a houseboat for a home, is attributed to Eben Stevens, who has been chosen for Commodore.

The houseboat is a double-decked affair. It is supplied with lockers, women's dressing rooms, and smoking rooms for the men. There are few sleeping rooms, as the homes of most of the members are in the Lawrence-Cedarhurst vicinity and can easily be reached by motor, while the Hunt Club at Cedarhurst can always be relied upon should any one from out of town want to put up for the night.

The lower deck is devoted mainly to the lockers and bathrooms, but the dining room, on the upper deck, is the attractive feature.

It overlooks the water and is furnished in mission style, while pictures of noted racing craft adorn the walls. At the stern of both upper and lower decks are observation places accommodating about a hundred persons each. These are very popular whenever the water sports are in progress.

The wives of the members have taken advantage of what they term "the yacht club," and it has become a popular place for social functions of all kinds. Water sports, however, have the prestige over everything else at the present time.

There are about fourteen catboats owned by the members, and almost every Saturday sees a good race.

The Rockaway Hunt Club has always been marked for its enterprise and originality. Aside from the regular polo tournaments booked for every season, it is the scene of a continual round of affairs, social and otherwise, including race meets, gymkhana events, and sports of every conceivable description.

Among the leading spirits of the club who spend much of their time on the houseboat are Phillips B. Thompson, W. A. Hazard, O. W. Bright, Burritt H. Sheppard, James B. Taller, H. Hobart Porter, Rene La Montagne, Jr., and Albert Francke. Still other members of the club include Robert L. Burton, Hartman K. Evans, David L. Haight, Frederic D. Philips, George Wickersham, J. E. Cowdin, Paul J. Rainey, Newbold T. Lawrence, Sherman Day, Winthrop Burr, H. C. Beadleston, and George G. McMurtry, Jr.

JOSEPH EBBETS ARRESTED.

Accused of Larceny by Manager Joseph Hart—Accounts $2,000 Short.

Josephs Ebbets, a bookkeeper living at 107 West Forty-second Street, said to be a brother of Charles Ebbets, Presidnt of the Brooklyn National baseball team, was arrested yesterday at Broadway and Forty-fourth Street on a charge of larceny made by Joseph Hart, the theatrical manager.

"Ebbets has been in my employ for five years," Mr. Hart said, "and I trusted him implicitly. When I went to Europe last Fall I left all my affairs in his charge. Several times I asked him far an accounting, but he always made some excuse about not sending it.

"When I returned in April my suspicious were aroused by the fact that the cashier of my bank said there had been no deposit made since April. Then I investigated.

"I have accounts with all the railroads and I found that the Pennsylvania held a bill against me for $305 for taking the 'Futurity Winner' company to Louisville. The money had been forwarded to Ebbets to pay this account in February, but he had not done so.

"I have had my accounts gone over and find them about $2,000 short. Ebbets wrote me a letter of confession and asked me to be lenient, and I have been. I gave him time to make restitution, but he failed to do so. I then had him arrested.

"Ebbets is about 54 years old, and I have known him for at least fifteen years. All my other men are under bonds, but I trusted him so implicitly that I never put him under bonds."

TAME BEAR LOOSE!

Help! Cries the Press Agent, and Vividly Describes Its Wickedness.

An appeal for help from Glen Ridge, N. J., reached the Bostock Arena at Coney Island yesterday and an animal trainer was sent in a hurry to find out what it was all about.

The trainer found a bear, said to be very ferocious, tied to a tree at the home of Johnson Martin of 65 Ridgewood Avenue, in the villa colony at Glen Ridge. The bear had been brought by Mr. Martin from South America and it was in such an ugly mood that he was willing to get rid of it by turning it over to Mr. Bostock.

According to the press agent who went along, the bear put up a fight that will long be remembered in Glen Ridge. It first attacked a servant who tried to feed it.

Martin, who is an ex-football player, then tackled the bear himself. The bear bit his hands and his father went to his rescue.

The fight was on in earnest when the trainer from Coney appeared and fired several blank cartridges at the bear, who immediately subsided. It was then put in a box, loaded on a wagon, and the trip to Coney Island began.

The horse ran away, according to the press agent, but was captured before the bear got loose. Late last night the animal arrived at the Bostock Arena and was unloaded without difficulty.

A real tamer will try to subdue it hereafter.

It will be Miss Roland's first rôle in English parts. Others in the company will be Nina Morris, Marion Lorne, Adelaide Orton, Anna L. Bates, Lionel Walsh, Richard Sterling, John Thomas, and John Hines.

A voting contest held recently by the Actors' Society of America has declared the Hudson Theatre to have the cleanest stage and dressing rooms. The prize was a silver loving cup.

Edward S. Abeles, late star of "Brewster's Millions," and Yvonne Lamor of the London music halls, have been engaged by E. F. Albee for Keith & Proctor's vaudeville theatres. The former will appear in a dramatic sketch entitled "Self Defense," at the Fifth Avenue next Monday.

Members of "The Motor Girl" company, now at the Lyric, will appear at the Polo Grounds next Thursday at the benefit for the New York Home for Destitute and Crippled Children.

C. W. KIRBY POLICE DEPUTY.

He Is a Business Man and Old Friend of Baker's—Staff Now Complete.

Commissioner Baker filled up the ranks of his deputies yesterday by appointing Charles W. Kirby Second Deputy Commissioner. Mr. Kirby went down to the City Hall in the afternoon with the Commissioner, and filed his certificate of appointment with the City Clerk. He was then sworn in.

Mr. Kirby is the junior partner in the real estate firm of Gibbs & Kirby, with offices at Broadway and 103d Street. He is 43 years old. He is a New Yorker by birth, and has lived here all his life. His home is at 240 West 104th Street.

He has no particular political affiliations, and has had no experience of public life, other than as a member of the West End Association, on which he has served as a member of several important committees. For twenty years he was in the Seventh Regiment, and retired as a Sergeant in Company E.

The new deputy is an old friend of Commissioner Baker's, who has known him for twenty-five years. When he was asked yesterday whether he knew anything about police matters, he cheerfully disavowed any special knowledge of them.

"I don't know any more about the department than the average citizen," he said, "but that does not matter. I shall not need any technical information. I am a business man, and my duties will be almost entirely of a business nature. I shall be responsible for the purchases of supplies, wherein a policeman is not required.

"I have been a quiet, peaceable citizen all my life, and that sort of man doesn't get into the newspapers, or acquire much knowledge of the workings of the Police Department."

As Second Deputy Mr. Kirby will take up the duties which fell to Commissioner Baker when he was brought over to Manhattan from Brooklyn.

Deputy Commissioner Bugher, whose special work is the Traffic Squad, is now First Deputy, and would be in charge of the department in the event of the illness or absence of Commissioner Baker.

Deputy Commissioner Kirby will look after the Bureau of Supplies, the training school for recruits, and the stabling and purchase of horses for the department. He is, in fact, the Quartermaster of the force.

CLEAN UP DELANCEY STREET.

Public Service Board Looks Street Over and Issues a Hurry-Up Order.

Acting Chairman William McCarroll, Commissioner Eustis of the Public Service Commission, with Chief Engineer Seamon, made an inspection yesterday of that part of Delancey Street which has been torn up by the Bradley Contracting Company in constructing the bridge-loop subway. Storekeepers have complained that the condition of the street is seriously hurting their business.

After interviewing William Marcus, President of the Public Bank, who headed the protestants, the Commissioners once more communicated with William Bradley of the Bradley Contracting Company, and the gist of their communication was that Mr. Bradley must hurry and get the street fixed up.

In the contract under which the Bradley Contracting Company is building part of the bridge-loop subway, there is a provision that the commission may, for cause, on thirty days' notice, terminate the contract and call upon another contractor to complete the work at the Bradley Company's expense. The commission believes that this provision will give to its demands sufficient force to make the contractor use all speed in clearing up the street.

MORGAN TO SHOW DUTCH ART.

He Will Bring Sixteen Old Masters for Hudson-Fulton Exhibit.

It came out yesterday that the part of J. Pierpont Morgan's art collection, which, according to his statement on returning from Europe on Wednesday night, the American people will have a chance to see during the Hudson-Fulton celebration in September, comprises sixteen paintings by the greatest of the Dutch school of the early seventeenth century.

The subjects are not yet known—they are for the most part portraits and landscapes—but among them are four Rembrandts, two by Frans Hals, two by Dirk Hals, two by Hobbemas, two by Aelbert Cuyps, a Ruisdael, a Meindert, and a Gabriel Metsu. They will be brought mainly from Mr. Morgan's house in London.

The general art exhibit in conjunction with the Hudson-Fulton celebration, of which Mr. Morgan's is to be a part, has grown rapidly. Mr. Morgan at first intended to loan only eight pictures, and while the whole collection was expected a short time ago to amount to but 80 pictures, the number promised is now 140.

The exhibition, to be held in the new wing of the museum, will include twenty-five Rembrandts, eleven Frans Hals, and paintings by de Hoogh, Jan Steen, Van der Mer, Van de Capelle, Terboch, and others.

HOSPITAL HONORS A WARD HEROINE

Doctors and Nurses of the Willard Parker Institution Give a Reception to Miss Holden.

RETIRES AFTER 29 YEARS

"The Girl Who Feared Nothing" Will Have a Pension from the City—Fought Through Many Epidemics.

Doctors and nurses, graduates and students of the Wallard Parker Hospital, at the foot of East Sixteenth Street, gathered last night for a reception and dance in honor of Miss Katharine B. Holden, who, after twenty-nine years of steady service under the Board of Health, retired yesterday.

She is the first nurse to be retired on a pension by the Board of Health, and she is the first one to be honored by such a gathering. She has worked throughout every epidemic this city has seen since she entered, as a very young girl, into the service. She has fought with scarlet fever, smallpox, and typhus, and only once has she herself been ill in all those years; that was with typhus, which the doctors say is inevitable when you tend those who are ill with it.

The head nurse, Miss Dunwoodie, and Dr. Hudson, one of the chief assistants, speak of Miss Holden as "the girl who feared nothing." When all others, they say, were pale with weariness and worry she was still steady and cool; when all others shrank from the terrible signs of disease, from the patients that raved and fought with suffering and delirium, it was Miss Holden who took care of them.

Not one case of smallpox, they say, in all the epidemics of those twenty-nine years has come to the hospital but she has tended it.

So last night they had the hall of the hospital decked with American flags and White Cross flags, with roses, and lanterns.

Suddenly the band broke into "Auld Lang Syne." People stopped dancing. Down the stairs under the big Red Cross flag came a woman, rather tall, dressed entirely in black. She had just the slightest limp; her hair was more white than gray, but there was youth in her blue eyes, and though there were lines on her face, they were lines of firmness.

That was Miss Holden of whom they tell many stories that show courage and endurance. They tell how unceasingly she worked among the smallpox patients in the epidemic of 1880, when she had just begun her career; how in the cold Winter of typhus, six or seven years ago, she went among the typhus patients that crowded North Brother Island, working in the thin canvas tents, and how once, in trying to move a man too heavy for her, she sprained her ankle so that she never quite recovered.

But one story in particular they tell. Once in the typhus epidemic people died so quickly on North Brother Island that there came to be almost a panic among the employes. Yet Miss Holden worked on quietly.

Then in a day fourteen patients died and were taken away quickly. But the employes at the Morgue refused to touch them; refused even to enter the building in spite of threats and commands, and no one else could be got it seemed. The head doctor, himself ready to work, could not do the thing alone, and none volunteered till Miss Holden heard of it. Then she insisted on helping, and at last, with the doctor, she put the bodies in their coffins.

That plague raged on for several months, and Miss Holden, who had never had typhus, and knew she must have it if she stayed, worked on in the cold tents. Then toward the very end, suddenly, as typhus comes, she, too, was stricken, and for nine days endured the fever and outlived it.

Since then she has fought many epidemics, yet her endurance is so great, her temper so even, that never again has she been ill.

The Rev. Albert H. Kelley.

The Rev. Albert H. Kelley, one of the oldest ministers in Yonkers, died at his home in that city yesterday morning, after a protracted illness. Ever since the death of his wife, six months ago, Mr. Kelley, who was 77 years old, had been failing. He was born at Soords, near Dublin, Ireland, in 1832, and received his earlier education there. He came to this country when 17. He was married to Margarita C. Bergen of this city in the Eighteenth Street Church fifty years ago, and was ordained in the Methodist ministry the same year. Since his superannuation in 1890 he had supplied many pulpits in the Westchester district. He leaves a son, Charles S. Kelley of Yonkers, with whom he lived, and an older son, Frank Bergen Kelley of Elizabeth, N. J. The funeral will be held on Saturday at 3 o'clock from the First Reformed Church. The interment will be in Oakland Cemetery.

A. Williams of this city. Judge Hudson was born in Chester, this State, in 1832. W. L. Riordan.

William L. Riordan, for many years chief political reporter for The Evening Post, died yesterday morning at his home, 110 East Eighty-second Street, after a long illness.

Mr. Riordan was closely identified with Tammany Hall affairs. He was born in Richmond, Va., forty-eight years ago. After working for several years on Washington newspapers he came to this city and was a member of the staff of the old Commercial Advertiser for five years. He went to The Post in 1891, and stayed there up to the time of his retirement, several months ago. For a time he represented The Post in Albany. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus, the City Hall Reporters' Association, and for many years was the New York correspondent of The Boston Transcript.

Mr. Riordan was probably best known as the author of "Plunkitt of Tammany Hall," which was published in 1905, based on the habits, methods, and philosophy of George Washington Plunkitt, at that time State Senator and Tammany district leader, in which the familiar expression "honest graft" was coined.

HAMMERSTEIN PLANS OPERA FOR CHICAGO

Impresario Is Now There Discussing His Project with Prominent Citizens.

TEST TRIP THIS SEASON

Mary Garden and Mme. Tetrazzini May Go There for Three Weeks—Opera House May Come Later.

Oscar Hammerstein, who is now in Chicago, is said to be contemplating the erection of a new opera house there, and is discussing the project with several prominent citizens of that city. His plan, which he announced in an interview yesterday, to take his company there for three weeks this season, is merely tentative. In case he does take Mary Garden, Mme. Tettrazzini, and the rest of his cast to Chicago, it will be only to feel the pulse of the public there.

It has just become known that Mr. Hammerstein has purchased a plot of ground in Brooklyn, which it is generally supposed he intends to use for his proposed Brooklyn Opera House. Arthur Hammerstein said yesterday, however, that as yet his father had no definite plans on the subject, that he had not even determined for certain to build in Brooklyn, and that all such matters would be decided later.

The plot of ground is at Bedford Avenue and Dean and Bergen Streets, 210 by 100 feet. It was bought from Mrs. Catherine Freel of 333 Clinton Avenue, widow of Edward Freel.

Last March Mr. Hammerstein announced his intention to build a Brooklyn Opera House, but at that time he had obtained no land. He was negotiating for the Freel property, but did not receive the deed until last Saturday.

EVERS'S TRICK WINS GAME FOR CHICAGO

Clover Cub Dashes for Home and Draws a Costly Throw from Wiltse.

GETS DE VORE BY SMUGGLE

Giants Lose, 3 to 1, in Contest That Should Have Been Scoreless at End of Ninth Inning—Myers Injured.

Anyway, they finished in daylight. Things have come to the point on the Polo Grounds where, if the Giants get through under two hours, fandom gets a big sigh of relief out of its system and goes home thankful at least for a hot dinner, regardless of the game's issue. As to the brand of ball, it's easy enough—and pretty cheap, too—to roast the home team when its losing. The veriest near-fan who can't tell a hit from a fielder's choice can do that, and generally does. Real rooters, of course, refrain from wholesale condemnation of a club when it's sliding downhill.

Chicago won, 3 to 1, and did it in Act I., without responding to the many curtain calls. Act IV. was New York's big scene, and only one count was carded. McGraw's men on their present form are outclassed by the Cubs. This is allowing for the temporary idleness of Mathewson and Doyle in consequence of injuries. Myers was added to the list of cripples in the opening battle of the Chicago series. One of his fingers was smashed by a foul tip from Archer's bat in the sixth round, and Schlei, though sorely in need of a rest, took his place behind the bat.

This is one of the occasions when you can't go by the score. Judging from that record, it was a good game, as Chicago made only five hits, including the game's one rap for an extra cushion, and fielded flawlessly with one exception, while New York got to Reulbach only four times and perpetrated no more than two misplays. Two men walked on each side, and seven Cubs were fanned against three Giants. Fairly, even, huh? In very truth, no. You had to see the contest to sense its one-sidedness. Chance's boys had wellnigh all the snap and dash. McGraw's players didn't show enough ginger to make a Jamaica cocktail. In the first place the locals were facing a great pitcher. The victory was Reulbach's ninth consecutive triumph. Reason 2 is that Wiltse's support was disheartened by his own costly error in Chapter I., which directly let in two tallies and indirectly a third, whereas the visitors shouldn't have scored at all.

Censure not the southpaw. After that fatal first inning he worked well and pluckily as long as his strength held out, which was until New York's half of the eighth. Gentleman George is not the man he was, and he never was among the sturdiest at best. He's a crafty craftsman and a willing worker—sand clear through—but he lacks the sheer physical endurance to go nine innings or to win oftener than once a week. Just now he is far from the top even of his mediocre strength. A valuable twirler, but only for one half or another of any game, or for a weekly early inning victory, with a chance to let down in the last few rounds.

Little Johnny Evers was the fox Cub who twice fooled the Giants. He worked Wiltse for Chicago's scoring in the first, and in the eighth he flimflammed De Vore out of New York's last chance. In the initial round he was on third, and Sheckard occupied second on Johnny's stroll, Jimmy's leaguer behind third base, and Schulte's out at first. Chance, with murder in his cold gray eye, sent one to the box intended to be much harder than it was. Wiltse stopped it and hastened toward the fourth alley, wherein Evers was taking a constitutional toward the plate, seemingly oblivious to the pitcher's rapid approach.

An ordinary base runner would have turned back to third—and almost certainly would have been nailed. Not so young Evers. He waited until Wiltse was within an inch or two of touching him, then spurted for home. George, who evidently had epected the runner to double in his tracks, lost the fraction of a second, but came to quickly and pursued the fugitive. Then, when, apparently, he could have reached out and touched Evers, he threw to Myers—slightly toward Myers, say, rather—with the result that Evers registered easily.

"Come on in, fellers—the scoring's fine!" shouted Johnny to Jimmy and Frank. Sheckard took the hint, but the Giants retrieved the ball in time to hold Chance on third. A few moments afterward the Topside Cub recorded on Steinfeldt's sacrificial raise to Murray.

New York's lone tally was booked on McCormick's dexter hit, Schulte's fumble that made the rap good for two bags, Murray's infield tap, and, following O'Hara's strike-out, Devlin's sacrifice fly. In the eighth Doyle, batting for Wiltse with one down, singled through the tiny hole Tinker left in short. Larry being lame, McGraw sent De Vore in to run for him. Hardly had Umpire Klem announced the substitution when De Vore, thinking he saw the ball in Reulbach's hands, took a lead off first—only to be snapped out to Chance by Evers, who had smuggled the sphere and worked an old trick with new pepperiness. The score:

Baseball Notes.

Washington has released Pitcher Altrock to the Minneapolis club of the American Association. Manager Cantillon of the Washington club is part owner of the Minneapolis club.

Double headers will be played in Brooklyn and Philadelphia to-morrow as the result of the postponement of yesterday's games on account of rain.

Sandow Mertes, the ex-Giant, has been appointed Captain of the Stockton team of the California State League.

Manager Mack of the Athletics has purchased the release of Pitcher Atkins, the star boxman of the Atlanta Southern League Club.

The Chicago White Sox have released Outfielder Welday to the Providence Club of the Eastern League.

Manager Stallings played Wednesday's game at Detroit under protest. When Laporte was spiked by Bush he went to the clubhouse with Trainer Tuthill to have the injury dressed, and Knight began warming up at second base in Laporte's place. Umpire Connolly announced that Knight would play. Then Capt. Elberfeld called Laporte back to the game, and when Laporte responded Umpire Connolly would not permit him to play, declaring that he had been displaced.

YANKEES' ONE RUN BEATS CLEVELAND

STOPPED BY RAIN IN SIXTH

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 22.—"Slow" Doyle, a heavy rain, and some timely batting gave New York the first victory of the series to-day in a six-inning contest. There was to have been a double-header, but rain, which often visits Cleveland along with the Yankees, came just in time to make the grounds too heavy for the first contest. The second game began with lowering clouds, with Doyle and Joss the opposing boxmen.

The Yankees were lucky in getting to Joss in the first inning with the one run that was sufficient to carry away the victory. After two were out Chase lined a double to centre and scored on Hemphill's single to right.

This was all, although it looked like Joss would be driven from the mound in the second inning. Austin beat out a pretty bunt, but by trying to pilfer second Neal Ball and Austin collided at second and Ball hurt his neck. He resumed playing, however, after a few minutes. Kleinow then walked and took third when Doyle singled. Demmit drove a hard one to centre, but Birmingham saved the day by a mervelous low running catch. After that Joss settled down, and there were no more chances for the visitors.

The Naps started off well, but did not get far. Flick got a single that Keeler prevented from being a double by clever footwork. Then Doyle settled down to business, and Cleveland did not get another hit until the fifth, when Hinchman, the second man up, drove the ball to the centre field fence. He had a clean triple, but tried to get home and was caught at the plate, Hemphill making a quick relay to Elberfeld, who threw to Kleinow just a foot ahead of the big fielder. Perring then drove what seemed to be an extra base hit over short, but Elberfeld jumped high and speared the ball. At the end of the sixth inning it rained so hard that further play was out of the question and Umpire Egan called the game.

Manager Stallings said to-day that he had not asked for waivers on Jack Chesbro, and did not expect to do so. He says Chesbro is just rounding into form and will be able to help his team. The score:

ENTRIES FOR HILL CLIMB.

Richfield Springs Event Is Attracting Motorists—Stevens May Drive.

The entry list for the first annual hill climb at Richfield Springs, N. Y., on July 31 is filling rapidly, and from the class of cars being nominated the climb is sure to be a success. In addition to a number of local amateur and professional entries there will be seen some of the best-known drivers and cars in the country. The Knox cars will be handled by William Bourque and Al Denison. There will be a pair of fast Chalmers-Detroits, a Chadwick "Six," and several Buicks.

An effort is being made to have S. B. Stevens, the famous amateur driver, compete in his powerful Mercedes car. Stevens is one of the few amateur drivers who adhere to this form of sport. There is every reason to believe that he will enter his car, as he has expressed a desire to set a record for the course which will hold for some years to come. The course, which starts from the Earlington Hotel, is being oiled and put in shape for the contest.

It is an unfortunate thing for the promoters of the climb that the contest is scheduled to take place July 31, for that is the date set for the ending of the twenty-four-hour race at Brighton Beach. A number of fast cars and drivers entered in the twenty-four-hour race would undoubtedly compete in the climb were it not for the Brighton Beach meet.

Brighton Beach race track is almost in shape for the first race meet to be held by the Motor Racing Association. The fences around the course have been rebuilt, and the laying of the new course was completed yesterday. The turns are to be banked a trifle more, and a layer of top dressing is to be put on the course before the race. It is expected that the track will be opened to owners of automobiles next Saturday. The laying out of the camps for competing crews also has been begun, and will be a novel feature of the meet. There will be two main avenues running parallel with the home stretch, with intersecting streets, along which will be pitched the tents to be used as sleeping quarters, eating quarters, and repair departments. The large hospital tent will be at one end of this canvas village.

Adams Defeats Keller at Ten Miles.

Ed. Adams defeated Frank Keller in a ten-mile professional match race last night at the Metropolitan Roller Skating Rink by a margin of ten yards in the slow time of 1:00:30. The race was to have been a fifteen-mile event, but when the contestants were told that the track could not be covered with sawdust and that they would have to run on the boards, they agreed to cut the distance to ten miles. The race in itself was a farce, and the victory of Adams was not at all satisfying. Keller led for six miles, and at times was more than a quarter of a lap in front of his rival, but would then slow up and let Adams catch him. In the remaining miles the lead went from one to the other frequently, with Keller apparently always the stronger of the two. When the men started on the final mile Adams was a few yards ahead, and maintained the advantage to the end. Neither runner apparently exerted himself until the final few laps, and the time for the last mile, 5:52, was the fastest of the event. The slowest mile was close to 7 minutes.

Eastern Handicap for Smith.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 22.—The Eastern Handicap, the final and chief event of the Inter-State Association's fourth Eastern trap-shooting tournament, which has been in progress here for the past three days, was won this afternoon by H. E. Smith, an amateur from Columbus, Ohio, who broke 98 out of 100 targets at a distance of eighteen yards. Second place was taken by the well-known professional, W. R. Crosby of O'Fallon, Ill., who scored 97 from twenty-one yards. Second among the amateurs was F. D. Peltier of Mount Clemens, Mich., who from eighteen yards scored 96. Third amateur was H. I. Hess of Nanticoke, Penn., the winner of the preliminary handicap yesterday. To-day he had to take twenty-one yards and made only 95 hits. Tieing for second among the professionals, with a score of 95, were J. R. Taylor of Atlanta and J. S. Fanning of New York.

Big catches of channel bass are now the rule at Corson's Inlet, N. J. August Wittkamp's West Jersey cottage is the headquarters of many of the fishermen who visit this place, and the returns of bass during the last week have been unusually large. Fish weighing from fifteen to sixty pounds were caught, James Cawthorne carrying off the honors with one of the top weight—sixty pounds.

The Pumpkin Patch in Jamaica Bay is noted for its weakfishing grounds, particularly in the vicinity of the oyster beds. These fish are now caught freely at the Patch, but the record haul of the season was made on Monday by Dr. John Keuke and J. Kappes, who were piloted by Capt. Baldwin. They pulled up between them seventy-two weakfish and five bluefish, and the fish weighed from two to five pounds each.

Bluefish have commenced to run freely in Raritan Bay and along the Long Island shore. Capt. Hammer of the Mergus says he ran into a big school on Tuesday, but the fish were of the small variety. Boating parties that left Capt. Morson's place at Sheepshead Bay also came back with fair catches on the same day.

Fishermen in Gravesend Bay have made big hauls of weakfish and fluke recently. On Wednesday, below the Ulmer Park Pier, Larry Wallace of the Euclid Fishing Club of Brooklyn caught ten weakfish in less than one hour, and he avers that not a fish weighed less than two pounds. Further up the bay on the same day Richard Lawrence caught eight weakfish and four fluke, and nearly opposite the Fort Lowrie Hotel Max Steinwitz of New York landed eleven weakfish, one weighing three pounds.

Monday was one of the best fishing days of the season at Deal Beach, N. J. James Forsyth and Harry Evans of this city while surf fishing caught sixteen weakfish, five bluefish, and three channel bass.

Deep-sea fishermen had one of the best day's sport of the season at the Cholera Banks yesterday. Both the Angler and Taurus took a big contingent to the Banks, and few returned without a mess of some kind. Seabass of good size are abundant, and in the collections yesterday were quite a number of blackfish and ling.

Anglers who have tried their luck in Lake Hopatcong contend that fishing for black bass never was more enjoyable than at present. Last week Albert L. D. Doscher of New York, without the assistance of a guide, caught sixty-four bass, one weighing close on to six pounds, near Woodport Cove.

WINTER TRACK COLT WINS THE STAKES

NIMBUS TAKES HANDICAP

Ida D., at Long Odds, Captures the Selling Sprint in a Close Contest at the Yonkers Track.

Donau, an early racing two-year-old from the Winter tracks of California and the Spring meetings of the West, ran his fourth race in the eight days that the Empire City Jockey Club's Yonkers meeting has been in progress, and was a winner for the second time in the feature event of the Yonkers programme. The colt's victory was in the Wakefield Stakes, at five and a half furlongs, for two-year-olds, and Donau, in front from start to finish, withstood every challenge made, and was first with something in hand, in time that equaled the fastest race at the distance run at the Yonkers meeting.

Reybourn and Fauntelroy were the choices, the horsemen generally expecting that Donau must feel the effect of his long early compaign, though earlier in the meeting he had beaten Reybourn, each having won over the other in their first two meetings. Donau was just as good as he was in his winning career in California, however, and from the moment that the barrier was lifted Donau was in front. Foursome and Reybourn each made an effort after him, but Donau shook them off, and, after leading into the stretch, drew off again when Fauntelroy, coming from the rear, went after him, Donau winning handily by a length and a half from Fauntelroy, with Reybourn a similar distance further back in third place. The time was 1:07, just equal to the record for the meeting made by Reybourn on the first day.

Donau, owned by William Gerst and trained by James Blute, has run in his short turf career twenty-nine races, beginning with a victory at Los Angeles on Jan. 12, and has won twelve times. Donau does not quite fit into the argument against the early racing of two-year-olds, and there is some little doubt of whether he really needs the let-up that Trainer Blute has said he might give him. It is likely, however, that Donau will have a rest until another race comes up with conditions to invite his entry.

The mile handicap, with Nimbus as the top weight, offered so remote a chance that anything in the race could beat Nimbus that half the entries were scratched out, and Nimbus at odds on took his top weight to the front and galloped there all the way, winning easily by four lengths from Bellwether, second, in a fast mile.

May River, at odds on, took the opening race nearly as easily, after Aunt Jule was indulged with the lead for about three furlongs.

The sprint for maidens two years old offered an open contest, in which Flying Footsteps quit close on the winning post after leading to the last sixteenth, Sir Neddam getting up to win by a half length from Captain Swanson, with Flying Footsteps third.

The longest-chance winner of the day cropped up in the selling sprint, run as the fifth race, Ida D. coming on at the finish, ridden and whipped out, winning by a head from Black Merry, which led away from the post and set the pace into the last few yards.

Aged Bobbie Kean took the track in the first strides of the mile and a sixteenth, last on the card, and was never headed, winning easily from Sir Cleges and the favorite, Bad News. The summaries:

Boxing at Fairmont A. C. To-night.

Local followers of pugilism are much interested in the four ten-round bouts scheduled for the Fairmont Athletic Club stag to-night. The main bout, which will be between "Knockout" Brown and Charlie Goodman, should result in a good contest. Both boys are fast fighters and good punchers. Three other ten-round bouts between good men will complete the bill.

SUMMER RESORTS.

NEW JERSEY—Atlantic City.

THE Marlborough-Blenheim
THE LEADING RESORT HOUSE OF AMERICA
BECAUSE,
TO THE WONDERFUL AND DESERVED POPULARITY OF ATLANTIC CITY,

with the finest bathing beach in the world (where 50,000 people are in the surf at one time;) its five miles of Elevated Ocean Boardwalk (with 3,000 Rolling Chairs;) its germicide climate; pure water, and modern sewerage system; its clean and perfectly paved streets and New Jersey's famous roads for motoring; its splendid theatres, amusement piers, and great fleet of sea-going sailing and fishing yachts, its noted 18-hole Golf Course; its countless other amusements and attractions; and its 300,000 daily Summer visitors from all over the world, the Marlborough-Blenheim contributes the most modern and complete accommodations to be found anywhere. If located in New York, London or Paris it would be one of their noted attractions. Occupying two blocks of central ocean front, with open air Plaza and Solariums overlooking the Boardwalk and the Ocean; its exterior is a striking architectural feature, while inside, the spacious Galleries and Exchanges and their artistic decorations have received a merited popularity with the cultured and refined patronage of the House. There are four dining rooms, two American and two a la Carte (all with white service) and separate American and European Plan Kitchens.

The Guest rooms are large and thoroughly modern, the lavatories have running ice water and the 400 private baths are each equipped with both hot and cold sea water and fresh water. Exquisite music, every night throughout the year, is one of the most appreciated features. Ownership management.

Atlantic City is but 3 hours from New York.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

SHARP RISE IN COPPERS

Metal Prices Up for Third Successive Day—July Wheat Weak—English Gold for South America.

Trading on the Stock Exchange yesterday was left almost exclusively to the professional element, commission houses executing only a negligible part of the total volume of transactions. To explain the early morning rise in prices, subsequent recessions and the final recovery, which left quotations fractionally above Wednesday night's prices, it is necessary, therefore, to canvass the various matters which influenced, or were thought to have influenced, professional traders in their operations during the day. There was a decided lack of originality in the alleged causes of the anxieties supposed to have forced prices down following the opening upturn. For stress was placed upon the lack of agreement among the conferrees on tariff legislation in Washington, "in spite of Mr. Taft's good offices," and the heaviness of United States Steel common "upon the growing belief that no increase would be made in the dividend to be declared on the stock on Thursday next." Both matters were made to do service in Wednesday's market, and perhaps this explains why their potency began to wane before the close of business yesterday. Incidentally, it is a rather curious state of affairs, with out-and-out speculators passing from ecstasies of joy to paroxysms of pain, and back again, over a dividend question raised solely by themselves. A market which reflects simply the consequent writhings under such self-torture is interesting, but hardly important. Another interesting phase of yesterday's market was the pains which certain groups of traders took to assist the Union Pacific to select investments. Assuming, apparently, that Mr. Harriman is incapacitated at the moment for this work, the Stock Exchange invested for him the $10,000,000 or more received on the sale of Atchison preferred stock, together with the earlier proceeds from the Southern Pacific convertible sale in New York Central shares. As a matter of fact, the Union Pacific investment in New York Central is exactly what it was a year ago. July wheat in Chicago tumbled sharply again, selling off almost 4 cents a bushel at one time and closing down 2 cents as a result of early and heavy deliveries from the new crop. Copper metal prices were advanced both here and in London, and copper securities responded by the strongest movements witnessed in them in some time. Now that the steel trade has turned the corner so definitely, the progress of the copper trade is certain to hold attention.

Time money rates, particularly for over the year periods continued to show signs of increasing firmness, while call money rates were maintained close to the maximum 2 per cent. figure through the day. Until the first evidence of the crop demand appears, however, in the form of Canadian requirements no substantial changes in rates are expected. The Bank of England made an excellent weekly return and forwarded during the day $7,000,000 gold to South America.

Bar silver in London was quoted 1-16d lower, at 23 7-16d per ounce, and in New York ⅛c lower, at 50⅞c per ounce. Mexican dollars were quoted at 44c.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT—Except for July in Chicago, which broke 3⅝c per bushel early in the day, the market had a narrow range yesterday, although mostly under selling pressure because of weak cables and favorable Western crop news, together with increasing new wheat receipts. Arrivals at all Western markets were 773,000 bushels, against 991,000 bushels last year. Minneapolis reported a fair cash demand. Liverpool was 1@¼d lower, while Berlin closed ½c off and Budapest ⅝c lower. Export sales were about 40 loads at outports. Cash wheat in New York closed: Old No. 2 red, $1.42 elevator and free on board, afloat, nominal; No. 2 Red new, $1.20¼ free on board, afloat, end August; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.40½, and No. 2 hard Winter, $1.33½ free on board, afloat, both nominal.

CORN—The undertone continued strong until after midday yesterday, when prices weakened about half a cent. Receipts were rather light, but crop conditions remained very favorable. Liverpool was ¼d lower. No. 2 corn in New York was quoted at 79½c elevator and 78½c free on board, afloat, for old, and 65c for new, free on board, afloat, Winter shipment.

Better Tone to Curb Trading Follows Improvement in Copper Metal.

Many Important Copper Issues Close Well Above Opening Prices—Chicago Subway Recovers.

The curb issues, with few exceptions, were strong yesterday, the copper issues especially reflecting the better tone in copper metal. Davis-Daly was unusually active, selling 4,900 on rising prices, the close being ¾ above the opening at 6⅜. Greene-Cananea gained ⅜, Cumberland-Ely, 1-16; Miami, ¼; Nevada Consolidated, ⅛, and United Copper, ¼. The losses of Wednesday in Chicago Subway were partially made up by a rise of 2 points, which carried that issue from 17 to 19 on transactions of 3,900 shares.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Speculators Are Sensitive.

It takes very little change in the market nowadays to stimulate hope or inspire fear, but those who are so easily influenced are not important factors. The fluctuations in Union Pacific or Steel or Reading or a few other stocks create much gossip, most of it beside the point and some of it highly imaginary. Some of the deductions that can be made from a reaction of a point in a given stock or an advance of the same amount are weird. It is unnecessary to say that the feelings of the so-called big interests cannot be analyzed, for the very good reason that they are not known. Consequently, their feelings when the market fluctuates a little bit one way or the other cannot be discussed, but they may be guessed. It would be reasonable to assume absolute indifference. The professional element is more tangible, most of them being found in the flesh in the financial district and their views being possible to quote, although the accuracy of their expressed views with relation to their actual stock market position is somewhat dubious. Most of them appear to have no very positive opinions nor any idea that a reaction of a point in Steel or an advance of a point in Union Pacific indicates anything significant.

Lethargy in Offices.

Cheerfulness was in evidence at the opening of the market, and the tendency to advance stimulated this desirable feeling. The subsequent action of the market was not sufficient, however, to make permanent the appreciation of suggested improvement in speculation from the point of view of the man long of stocks. As a matter of fact, most of the fluctuations during the day were interesting only to the man who had market commitments. Their general interest was extremely limited. Brokers did not report much doing in their offices, and were disposed to credit whatever activity there might be to the professionals. The wire houses, with one or two exceptions, had limited orders from out of town, and the same general lethargy prevailed therein as in the offices of limited scope. Judging by obvious conditions in brokerage offices professional activity is the important stimulant at the moment.

New York Central Gossip.

Before the opening of the market there was talk of activity in New York Central, and the theory was exploited that some of those who had been active in Steel common, and who regarded the upward movement of that stock as likely to be extremely slow, at least, in the near future, had diverted their speculative attention to New York Central. It was said that some of the interests directly concerned with the improvement in Steel prices had transferred their allegiance to New York Central. These ante-opening prophecies are always accepted subject to verification. In the case of New York Central yesterday the promoters of the theories concerning this particular railroad alleged that the action of the stock during the day had verified their statements completely. This sort of thing is not exactly mere gossip, inasmuch as it circulates, at first, only among a few offices, but if there be a disposition to accept this kind of talk as based possibly on fact the stock will undoubtedly be influenced for the time being. The test of this kind of tip is in the ultimate action of the security mentioned. Hopeful stories concerning New York Central have been in circulation, but they have been set down as of the same character as similar optimistic utterances concerning various other stocks.

⁂

That Morgan Interview.

No one was disappointed when Mr. Morgan refused to give an extended interview on all phases of the stock market, the business situation, and the tariff. It has not been his custom to give formal interviews, and there are few newspaper men who have ever been assigned to interview him who have not dilated on the brevity of his remarks.

⁂

Changing to Other Markets.

One of the most ancient stories in the speculative world is the exact profit that every new wheat or corn or cotton "king" makes after some spectacular rise in the particular commodity in which he is interested. A man who has been credited with jacking up the price of wheat is supposed to have made so many millions of dollars last year that he has sent for the tax assessors that they may equalize his assessment to conform with his newly acquired profits and his sensitive conscience. Unfortunately, the actual profits do not always square with the guesses or estimates, and the so-called lucky associates of these big traders are very often hard hit in the market. One result of these reiterated stories is stimulated speculative fever, and sometimes the diverting of traders who know the stock game pretty well to the grain and cotton markets. The man who transfers his allegiance from stocks to grain or cotton finds it necessary quite often to have his financial obituary prepared soon afterward.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The General Biscuit Company has been organized under the laws of Connecticut with a capital of $3,000,000 preferred stock and $3,000,000 common stock. C. M. Warner is President, H. Wittenberg Vice President, and R. J. Furbeck Secretary and Treasurer. Other Directors are Henry Rowley, A. M. Brookes, and M. Thomsen.

Myron T. Herrick, C. L. Rossiter, and R. A. C. Smith, committee of the Albany & Hudson Railroad Company security holders, inform holders of first mortgage bonds, preferred stock, and common stock that a suit having been instituted for the foreclosure of the first mortgage, the committee has prepared a plan and reorganization agreement, copies of which may be obtained at the office of the Trust Company of America, 37 Wall Street. Holders are requested to deposit their securities with the Trust Company, for which receipts will be issued.

COPPER REFORMS ADOPTED.

Recommendations by Legislative Committee Followed by Metal Exchange.

The Board of Managers of the Metal Exchange adopted the report of the institution's Trade Committee yesterday providing for dealings hereafter in standard copper similar to those on the London Exchange.

The measure is designed to satisfy the criticism made by the Wall Street Investigating Committee to Gov. Hughes. Hereafter minimum quantities of standard must be of 25 tons of 2,240 pounds each. All bids or offers to sell shall be made in multiples of this number. Sellers will have the option of delivering each 25 tons in four different classes of copper.

Classifications shall be based on the per cent. of assay and subject to rebate or premium, as outlined in the committee's report.

Commissions are to be at the rate of $1 per ton when sales are made to persons other than members of the Exchange, and at 50 cents when made for members. Whenever made for a member of the Exchange, whose name is given up and accepted on the day of transaction, they are to be at the rate of 25 cents per ton, and a charge of 12½ cents per ton is to be made for receiving and delivering.

Copper stored in warehouses in New York will be good delivery, as will be negotiable receipts of the following refineries: Raritan Copper Works, Perth Amboy Works of the American Copper Company, the Nichols Copper Company, the Baldbach Smelting and Refining Company, and the United States Metals Refining Company. Such receipts, however, must contain the clause, "Lighterage free to New York."

THE COTTON MARKET.

See-saws on Storm and Cold Weather News—Closes 4 to 8 Points Down.

Cotton continued very nervous and irregular yesterday, with a range of about 29 to 30 points, lowest prices being reached late. The close was steady at a net decline of 4@8 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 4 points to a decline of 4 points, but the market quickly weakened on easier late cables, increasing indications that the drought had been broken in Texas. This was followed by a period of decided irregularity during the middle of the day.

The forecast for much cooler weather following the rains in the Southwest was a considerable factor, as an immediate renewal of high temperature would cause excessive shedding and other damage, and there was fear that the rains will revive the boll weevil.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—Philadelphia stocks resisted the heavy tendency of the New York market, but the volume of trading dropped to insignificant figures. Electric Storage Battery was in spasmodic demand, but shaded off a small fraction in the afternoon. Lehigh Valley, Pennsylvania, and Cambria Steel sold at small recessions, while Philadelphia Electric on nominal sales held above 12. A slump of over a point in Bell Telephone aroused some comment.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

American Securities Close Firm on the London Exchange.

LONDON, July 22.—Money was in good supply but in poor demand on the market to-day. Discounts were firm on the large gold shipments to South America.

On the Stock Exchange dealings were small and uninteresting, being confined principally to investment buying of good yielding securities, which again were dearer. Home rails continued to benefit by satisfactory dividends, but in other directions values were easy on lack of support.

American securities opened quiet and later hardened slightly. Then profit taking caused a set-back, and at noon the market was easy, with values from ¼ higher to ½ lower than yesterday's New York closing. The market sagged further, but Wall Street bid up the Harriman issues, United States Steel, and Amalgamated sharply, which strengthened the others, and the market closed firm. Diamond shares closed strong.

The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 1¼ per cent.; for three months' bills, 1⅜ per cent.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, July 22.—The Boston market opened strong this morning, with the copper shares in good demand. The strength in Amalgamated in the New York market was a very favorable factor, and gains were soon recorded in all the active issues. The reaction in the New York market during the early afternoon, however, checked the advance for the time being, but offerings were light, and toward the latter part of the session the undertone again turned strong and prices were moved along to a new high level. The market closed steady and at very nearly top prices for the day. Complete transactions were:

PLAN TO PAY BACK DIVIDENDS.

Republic Steel Issues Warrants Payable Yearly Up to 1915.

The accumulated back dividends on the cumulative 7 per cent. preferred stock of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, totaling 6¾ per cent., have been funded into transferrable dividend warrants payable at the rate of 1 per cent. annually on each Oct. 1 up to 1915.

The company, which had paid the regular 7 per cent. dividend on this issue from 1899 to 1903, made up the dividends which accumulated unpaid in 1904 during the boom times of 1906 and 1907. Dividends were again discontinued in April, 1908, and resumed again last month when, in addition to the regular quarterly disbursement of 1¾ per cent., an additional dividend of ¼ per cent. on account of the deferred dividends was declared. There still remain 6¾ per cent. back dividends due on the preferred stock, of which 1 per cent. is made payable on Oct. 1, the balance payable at the rate of 1 per cent. yearly until 1915 being represented by the dividend warrants which will be issued on Aug. 1.

New financing to take care of contemplated extensions of the Republic Iron and Steel Company's business has been talked of in Wall Street for some months. At first it was suggested that bonds would be issued, but is has become the general belief that the Directors would put out additional preferred stock.

Although President Topping refused yesterday to discuss the possibility, the fact that the deferred dividends on the present issue have now been put out of the way was taken in financial circles as an indication that the Directors are getting ready to issue additional preferred stock, which would now be on an equal footing as regards dividends with the outstanding shares.

TO CHANGE LEATHER CHARTER

Central Company to Meet Objections Raised by Jersey Court.

Stockholders of the Central Leather Company have been called to a special meeting on Aug. 19, at which it is proposed to amend the certificate of incorporation of the company so as to overcome the objections found by the Court of Errors and Appeals of New Jersey to its acquisition of the assets of the United States Leather Company, of whose stock it owns something over 90 per cent.

The New Jersey courts held that the Central Leather Company's charter did not permit it to carry out the consolidation with the United States Leather Company, which was proposed in 1905 when the Central Leather Company exchanged its securities for those of the United States Leather Company. The preferred shareholders of the latter company were then offered 50 per cent. in Central Leather collateral trust bonds, 50 per cent. in preferred stock, and 23½ per cent. in common stock.

Common stockholders of the United States Leather Company were to receive 30 per cent. in the common stock of the Central Leather Company for their holdings. The minority, which refused to make the exchange, have since fought the physical consolidation of the two companies through all of the New Jersey courts.

The changes in the charter of the Central Leather Company now proposed bring the company into line with the New Jersey court decision, but at the same time do not omit any powers necessary to the business of the company.

DISCUSS PANAMA ISSUE.

Treasurer Treat Gets the Views of New York Bankers.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The possibility of depreciation of outstanding securities of the Government in case the Treasury throws on the market any portion of the Panama Canal bonds, whose issuance is to be authorized to the extent of the total estimated cost of completion of the canal, was the subject of conferences in New York yesterday between United States Treasurer Charles H. Treat and financiers there.

Fear has been expressed in Wall Street that if the proposed bonds, which are to bear interest not exceeding 3 per cent., are to be permitted to be used as a basis for bank note circulation, it would make almost limitless the currency that might be taken out. Three bank Presidents were among those with whom Treasurer Treat talked in New York, and each gave his views along that line.

Treasury officials take the position that there is no likelihood of depreciation of outstanding bonds even if any considerable portion of the proposed canal bond authorization is taken advantage of.

THE COFFEE MARKET.

Coffee opened steady at unchanged prices to a decline of 5 points, increased the loss somewhat in the late trading, and closed barely steady, net unchanged to 10 points lower. Sales were reported of only 6,500 bags.

The market is hardly broad enough for hedging, but Brazilian offers are said to be low enough in some cases at least to permit of a little selling here against coffee to arrive. It is reported that a little coffee is coming here from Charleston before the end of the month. The French market was unchanged to ½f. lower, and Hamburg was unchanged to ¼ pfennig lower. Neither of the Brazilian markets reported any change. Fine weather was reported in all sections of Sao Paulo.

Spot coffee was quiet; 7⅝c. for Rio No. 7.

JOHN R. CORBIN CO HOUSES "As Good as a Corbin House." THE ACME OF QUALITY—THE STANDARD OF COMPARISON. JOHN R. CORBIN CO HOUSES

Builders and brokers who have examined the "Corbin Houses" realize they are unequaled, and cannot be duplicated at their price; and, in their zealous efforts to sell other and inferior houses, by endeavoring to raise them, by comparison, to that high standard of construction occupied by the "Corbin House," involuntarily admit their superiority; for who would select anything but the VERY BEST as an object of comparison?

Why Are They The BEST?—Why Are They Selected As The MEDIUM OF COMPARISON?

Because—Architecturally and mechanically PERFECT, faultless in interior arrangement and decoration, and built for comfort and health;

Because—Constructed under the Direct Supervision of the Superintendent of each of our various departments, who are the BEST MECHANICS obtainable in their particular branches;

Because—Built by Standardized Construction, of the BEST MATERIAL, purchased in enormous quantities at WHOLESALE PRICES, saves the purchaser from 20% to 25%.

Because—The Mortise and Tenon method, which is used throughout, insures RIGID CONSTRUCTION, thereby reducing the cost for repairs in after years to a MINIMUM.

Our Reference:—OWNERS of "Corbin Houses."
Our Motto:—TRUE REPRESENTATION.
Our Goal:—PROGRESS and PERFECTION.

Eliminating Frauds.

The Charity Organization in its recent report on the desirability of establishing an Employment Bureau in New York, told of its investigation of the Want Advertising columns of two New York newspapers. In the final analysis the conclusion was arrived at that 33.7 per cent. of the Help Wanted advertisements of these two New York newspapers fall under the head of what might be termed fraudulent or misleading advertisements. The report says, in part:

> The most superficial examination of the Want columns of any newspaper which has developed this feature on a large scale discloses the fact that many of those which are nominally for help are "fake" advertisements—that is, that they do not represent a bona-fide opportunity for employment of the kind indicated in the heading. Many others are intentionally vague and misleading, and, frequently, after eliminating such padding, an exceedingly small remnant of bona-fide requests for help remains. The system at best throws entirely upon the advertiser the responsibility of sifting out from among the replies to advertisements the one which suits his needs.

The New York Times recognizes its responsibility in keeping out fraudulent advertisements, and has for some time publicly offered a reward for the arrest and conviction of any person obtaining money by means of a misleading advertisement in The Times. Every advertisement, however small, is scrutinized carefully. Even careful scrutiny, however, will not keep The Times' Want page absolutely clear of fraudulent advertisements, and in this respect the readers of The New York Times can help materially. Information concerning advertisements will be treated confidentially.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Japanese Curios of Many Kinds Are Required to Pay a Higher Duty.

Japanese curios of many kinds included in an importation made by Wing Tong Hing & Co. of Yokohama were held yesterday by the Board of United States General Appraisers to be undervalued. When the merchandise reached this country the local officials, after an inspection of the invoiced values, decided that the purchase prices of the articles were too low. Duty was accordingly exacted on the higher values deemed by the appraiser to be nearer the foreign market values.

The importer then filed an appeal with the board for a reappraisement, with the result that General Appraiser Chamberlain fails to sustain the contention for the assessment of duty on the basis of the entered values. The only exception concerns lacquered boxes, which the General Appraiser allows to enter at the prices invoiced. The other articles on which higher valuations are affirmed include handkerchief boxes, tortoise shell cigar cases, brass hanging hooks, paper fire stands and fans, copper call bells, bone monkeys, bone buckles, and silk embroidered Japanese kimonos.

A controversy between the Government and J. A. Ruiz of Tehuacan, Mexico, regarding the values of palm leaf hats was settled in favor of the importer. The action of the local appraiser in raising values for the purpose of assessing duty is not approved.

THE HALF MOON HERE; UNLOADED TO-DAY

Reproduction of Henry Hudson's Ship Arrives Stowed Away on the Holland Liner's Deck.

GOING TO THE NAVY YARD

Tiny Craft Will Be Unloaded by the Great Crane There and Equipped for the Celebration in the Fall.

The Holland-American liner Soesdyk, which put out from Rotterdam on July [illegible] with the reproduction of Henry Hudson's Half Moon occupying a small space on her forward deck, anchored last night off Quarantine with the little oaken craft safe aboard.

To-day she will carry the Half Moon to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where it will be lifted bodily from the big steamship by the powerful navy yard crane, and put into the river. Later the Half Moon will be fitted out to the minutest detail as was her original when, in the year 1609, she sailed up the Hudson under the command of Henry Hudson.

The reproduction of the Half Moon, which, with Fulton's Claremont, is to sail up the river in September under the escort of a fleet of war vessels, is Holland's contribution to the Hudson-Fulton celebration. She was built by a committee of prominent citizens in Amsterdam, Holland, through public subscriptions.

She will lie in the Brooklyn Navy Yard until late in September. Then, on Sept. 25, will come the rendezvous and parade up the river with a flotilla of some forty American and foreign war vessels about her and the Claremont.

On her lofty poop will stand Henry Hudson's impersonator, Lieut. Lam of the Utrecht of the Dutch Navy, and real Dutch sailors in the clothes of Hudson's day, chosen from the Utrecht, will man her.

The committee of Dutchmen which had charge of the reproduction of Henry Hudson's Half Moon, made their design after long study of old papers and histories.

The result was the little three-masted craft that came into the harbor last night, an exact fac simile of the one in which Hudson voyaged from Rotterdam with a mixed crew of about eighteen Dutch and English sailors. She is built of carefully selected boards of perfect oak, such as her original needed in pushing through the ice, when on May 19 she reached the North Cape.

Her stern is very high, curved, and blunt, and upon it is painted the figure of a half moon; she runs low in the waist, and then up again at the bow, but not nearly so high as in the poop, from where a man can overlook the whole ship.

In actual dimensions she is but seventy-four feet long and but seventeen feet wide in the waist. She is little over ten feet deep, and draws only 7.03 feet o water. Foreward lies the forecastle, fitted with five bunks for the crew, and there is room there or two in a bunk.

The "gallery," as it was called, lies out under her bowsprit, so that the waves can break on it and over it, for there Henry Hudson used to expose his seamen when he felt they needed punishment, and there, too, was fastened the "blind sail" as they called it, because it interrupted the pilot's view.

The halyards running from the mast are fastened to two blocks, and on one of them is fixed the wooden head of a sailor, apparently yawning, for his mouth is wide open. Nearer the stern, built under a little roof, is the helmsman's platform. The rudder was turned by a whipstaff, and just in front of where he stands there will be placed, when the boat sails up the Hudson, the sand glass, the log glass, and the compass, reproductions of those used by Henry Hudson. Under the lofty poop is the cabin of the Captain, the largest chamber on the boat. In it stands a table, on which lies an exact reproduction of the sea chart used in those days by seamen, and there is besides, under the berth, such a sea chest as Hudson used, and in it the books he had with him, including the Bible. In the cabin, too, is a copy of the contract which bound Hudson in this voyage to the East India Company, copied from the minute book of the Directors of that company on file in Amsterdam.

Then there are the dividers and little sticks of wood used for measuring, and there is the "Jacob's Staff," a primitive sextant by which Hudson and contemporary skippers calculated their latitude. There are also the old-fashioned muskets, those that the Manhattan Indians later learned to know, and the rough candlesticks, plates, and jugs.

The little Half Moon brought with her by way of arms two small and two large cannon, though the large ones now look like playthings beside those of a man-o'-war. The small guns stand on the deck near the rail—they are the old-time swivel guns. On the 'tweendeck are the heavier pieces. They weigh 800 pounds each.

There is beside a rough cabin for the cook, with a little hard berth in it, a sail room, and at the stern, the gunner's room, where the powder was stored. Below in the little hold are the store rooms, roughly partioned off, where the provisions were kept, the casks of fresh water, the cables, and cargo.

Like the Half Moon of 1600 her counterpart carries three masts, but only one would be counted a real mast now. To the little foremast are fixed the foretopsail and foresail; to the bowsprit the blindsail. On the mainmast, in the middle of the boat, are the mainsail and maintopsail, both square. On the mizzenmast a lateen sail is rigged.

When the little craft sails up the river she will carry at her rail the old East India Company's flag, the national tricolor, with the monogram of the company, "V. O. C.," on the white stripe, and above that the letter "A," to show she was commissioned by the Amsterdam Chamber. From the foremast will fly the red, black, and red tricolor of Amsterdam; from the bowsprit the small jack of orange, white, and blue, and from the mainmast the State flag of Holland, the gold field with the red lion.

Such was the boat in which Hudson, forced back by the ice at the North Cape, sailed to the American coast, touching on July 12 at the coast of Maine, then exploring Delaware and Chesapeake Bays, and finally, on Sept. 2, reaching a point, probably Navesink Highlands, on the south side of New York Bay. On the next day he found a good place inside Sandy Hook, and there the Half Moon rode safely at anchor, while its Captain put in a week in exploring the coast and adjacent regions. Then, on September 11, they "entered," so says the log, "into as fine a river as can be found."

On the 14th, pushing up the river, as wind and tide allowed, they came to "the very high and mountainous region"—the highlands—and on the 15th to "other mountains very high and mountainous which rise from the river's side."

The Half Moon voyaged little further, but returned down the river, and from Oct. 2 to Oct. 4 lay at anchor off Hoboken. The next day, dropping down the harbor with the tide, she put out again to sea.

So, just as did her original, the new Half Moon will first cruise about the lower bay along the shores of Brooklyn and Staten Island on the day of her reception, and then start up the Hudson. She will proceed five short stages with the Claremont, anchoring at towns along the way. On Friday, Oct. 1, the fleet of war vessels will overtake her at Cornwall and proceed as an escort on to Newburg. From there on the North Hudson River Naval Division will escort them to Troy.

VOTERS TO HELP DRAW ISSUES

Hundred's Offices in Fifth Avenue, Where Suggestions Will Be Welcome.

The Committee of One Hundred, it was learned yesterday, adopted a resolution at its last meeting providing for a plan whereby the voters would be asked to aid in formulating a platform and framing the issues on which the campaign against Tammany Hall this Fall is to be fought. This is a new departure, but in keeping with the plan adopted by the Committee of Nineteen, which was appointed to select the members of the full Committee of One Hundred. That committee as now constituted is the result of suggestions made by the general public.

On or about Aug. 1 the Committee of One Hundred will move into a large suite of offices in the Fifth Avenue Building, which occupies the site of the old Fifth Avenue Hotel. After the committee has taken possession of its new offices there will be several members on hand most of the time to receive citizens who have complaints to register or suggestions to make. It is the desire of the committee, according to a statement made yesterday, to "have the views of the people fully represented in the plans and activities of the Committee of One Hundred."

The committee intends to seize time by the forelock and deal with the question of election abuses before any such abuses can possibly occur this year. The committee feels that the recent revolutionary changes in the Police Department were made with a view to paving the way for widespread abuses at the polls in favor of Tammany Hall.

So the committee has invited voters who have met with unjust interference at the polls in past years to relate their experiences. Many of these have been put in affidavit form. Some will be used as campaign material, others are being filed away for reference and will be used by the Committee of One Hundred as a guide in guarding against similar abuses in the election this Fall. The Committee of One Hundred is now considering the advisability of organizing a force of agents to co-operate with the State Superintendent of Elections at the primaries, on election day, and before, to guard against colonizing and repeating.

While the committee has taken the uptown headquarters, the quarters downtown may not be abandoned. The rooms in the Beaver Building have proved very convenient for members of the committee from all boroughs who have been compelled to attend the series of meetings held by various sub-committees weekly. The downtown headquarters may be maintained or other rooms in that part of the city obtained.

HYPNOTISM FOR A BAD BOY.

Court Directs Physician to Use the Treatment to Reform Him.

For the first time in Brooklyn hypnotism is to be exercised by order of a court to reform a bad boy. Magistrate Furlong, in the Gates Avenue Court, yesterday turned 16-year-old Bernard Schapf over to the care of Dr. Siegfried Block, a physician and hypnotist of 848 Greene Avenue. Dr. Block told the court that he had cured the lad of certain mental ailments by means of hypnotism and said he was confident that he could reform the boy by such means.

Young Schapf was arrested for an alleged attempt at robbery. When his case was called yesterday Dr. Block appeared for him.

"This boy," said the physician, "has been under my care for several years. He has tried very hard to do what is right. I will make myself responsible for his good behavior, even if I have to use my hypnotic ability. When I first knew him he never worked and was useless in every way. To-day he works and brings home every penny he earns.

"It may be he made a mistake and fell back into one of his old ways. I really believe he should have a chance, especially if placed under my care. As a probationary officer of the Children's Court, I have handled hundreds of delinquents and have made a study of defective children. I do not think he is wholly responsible. I have treated him off and on on by hypnotism and am confident that I can improve him now in that way."

The hypnotist hemmed and hawed a bit when the Magistrate asked him if he was sufficiently interested to give a bond of $250 for the boy to keep the peace for six months.

"I am not so sure," said he, "that he will not break out again."

The Magistrate smiled and said he would place the boy on probation.

"You can go as far as you like with your hypnotic influence, Doctor, if you think it will do the lad any good," said he.

Dr. Block said that he would begin his hypnotic treatment of the boy on Sunday.

CAUGHT UNDER FALLING SHED.

Roof Gives Way with 100 On It—Three to the Hospital.

To watch the return of the Dan Vitelli Association, which had an outing yesterday, several thousand people gathered in the neighborhood of First Avenue and 100th Street last night. The top of a corrugated iron shed covering the sidewalk and extending from the first floor of the house at 343 East 100th Street around the corner and for some distance along the avenue offered a vantage point for the viewing of the fireworks which were to be set off in front of Vitelli's saloon across the street as an end to the celebration, and about 100 people climbed up onto this.

The parade was just approaching the corner when the last two posts supporting the shed roof snapped and let a section of the roofing about 30 feet in length sag down into the street. About half of those on the shed slid down to the ground, bruised and cut somewhat, but not seriously hurt. Beneath the iron, however, a score or more were caught.

Policeman Gisselbrecht heard their cries, and, prying up one end of the broken roof with his night stick, he got a shoulder under it and raised it enough for some of the crowd to drag their companions out.

Joseph Pirolo of 345 East 100th Street, Catherine Monihan of 1,950 Second Avenue, and Pauline Cohen of 321 East 101st Street were badly enough hurt to be taken to Harlem Hospital. Pirolo's hip was fractured; the Monihan girl had a broken jaw, and Miss Cohen's leg was cut.

When the shed fell, Theresa Dewelt and Maria Recka, both elderly women, caught a windowsill on the first floor and clung there until Policeman Lamb helped them down. Each held an infant in her arms and all escaped injury.

PLATTS CAN'T GET TO COURT.

Counsel Pleads That ex-Senator Is Ill and Sons in Need of a Rest.

An order to show cause why the taking of testimony in the suit brought against the United States Express Company by John L. Dudley of 114 East Thirty-seventh Street should not be delayed until Sept. 15 has been served on Dudley's counsel, Louis H. Newkirk, and will be argued before Supreme Court Justice Brady to-day. The delay is asked because almost everybody concerned is said to be either ill or out of the city.

In an affidavit counsel for the express company says that ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt is convalescing from a serious illness, and physically unfit to attend court; that Chauncey H. Crosby is out of town, and that both Frank H. and Edward T. Platt need a vacation. Newkirk declared that the excuses were poor ones, and that he would oppose an adjournment.

MUST ASK TO BE DISBARRED.

Sentence on Lawyer Hochstadter Suspended on That Condition.

Oscar J. Hochstadter, a lawyer in the Harlem Court, living at 509 West 135th Street, who was arrested recently on a charge of grand larceny, was released yesterday by Judge Foster in General Sessions on suspended sentence, on condition that he would take action toward his own disbarment. Three other similar indictments now pending against the prisoner will probably be dismissed.

The complaint against Hochstadter was made by Mrs. Maria Vetter, whose husband was arrested recently on a misdemeanor and held in $300 bail for Special Sessions. Mrs. Vetter gave Hochstadter $200 as security for a bondsman in case the bond should be forfeited. When the case was dismissed the woman tried to get her money back from the lawyer, but was unable to do so. He delayed so long, she said, that she brought the matter to the District Attorney's office and Hochstadter was [illegible].

FLUNG THEIR BABIES AT THE INSPECTORS

Frenzied Gypsies Used Children for Weapons in Savage Battle Against Deportation.

TWO LITTLE ONES INJURED

Mothers Joined in the Fight, Using Nails, Teeth, Hands, and Feet Against the Officials.

Using all the force of which they were capable against deportation, the band of twenty-four gypsies who were barred from the country as undesirables, were put on the Lamport & Holt liner Verdi yesterday to be sent back to Buenos Ayres, whence they embarked to this city.

The scenes attending the placing of the men and women on the vessel were so disorderly that the crew of the steamer and longshoremen from the pier had finally to take a hand and assist the Immigration Inspectors in getting their charges on ship board.

The weapons of the band had been taken from them on Ellis Island, so having nothing with which to make the attempt to fight their way ashore they grabbed up their children, hurled them at the Inspectors, or, seizing them by the legs, used them as bludgeons to fight the Government officials.

The Gysy band—six men, eight women, and ten children—arrived here on the Lampport & Holt Line steamship Tennyson on Monday. They had $1,500 in money, several thousand dollars' worth of jewelry, ten wicker baskets, and many trunkfuls of effects. In spite of this showing the immigration officials decided that they were not wanted in this country, and ordered their deportation.

This action of the Commissioner angered them, and they were desperate when they were placed on the tug John J. Timmons yesterday morning to be put on board the Verdi at her Brooklyn pier. With them went six men of the deportation force under Inspector Tillson.

They talked excitedly during the trip across the upper bay, and when the tug went alongside the Verdi they refused to go up the gangplank. Seeing that it was useless to try to force them from the tug to the steamship, Inspector Tillson ordered the tug alongside the pier.

As the small boat bumped up to the pier, the Gypsies, seeing a way of escape, scrambled to the pier. The Inspectors were ahead of them, however, and as the group started on a run toward the street the officials headed them off and began forcing them toward the gangplank.

This action brought the struggling, shouting band to a pitch of madness. The Inspectors were forcing the chief, a squatty, dark-haired man of great strength, toward the steamship, when two of the women attacked him. The women flung themselves on the Inspectors trying to bite their arms.

The officials tried to push the women away. One of them stumbled and fell to her knees. Then with cries the others came to the rescue of their companions. The maddened women picked up the children and swung them around their heads as weapons. A tall woman took the child she was holding in her arms, held it aloft for an instant, and then hurled it with all her might at one of the Inspectors.

The baby struck him in the chest and as he went reeling back the child fell to the pier, striking on its head. It lay there crying and in danger of being trampled to death when a 'longshoreman picked it up and forced the mother and her injured child out of the fight.

In the meantime the two inspectors were in the centre of a struggling, fighting, clawing mob of men and women. Inch by inch the inspectors forced their charges back toward the steamship's gangway.

The gypsy chief, freed for a moment from his captors, darted across the pier, and seized a girl of about two years. With one movement he stripped the flimsy dress from the little one, and grabbing her by the legs advanced again to the fight. He whirled the child about his head, and as a war club struck Tillson on the head. He swung again, but the inspector at whom he aimed, got out of range.

Then half turning he flung the child at another inspector twenty feet away. The little one struck the board floor face down and lay there dazed. A woman took her child and struck at an inspector. He dodged and the child's head came in contact with an upright timber, making a cut across the forehead. She dropped the child blood covered and unconscious.

During the early part of the fight the longshoremen and the ship's crew stood off, but as soon as they saw the chief pick up the child they came in with a rush. They caught the chief and booted him all the way up the gangplank. Other followers of the chief fared no better at their hands, and the women were treated only a shade better than the men.

Once driven on board, the battered, disheveled band was forced to the steerage deck. There the women knelt on the boards and held up their children for the crowd to see. The chief walked among them, pointing to the little ones and then to the Inspectors, as though to convince all that the Government Inspectors had injured them.

The Verdi then started on her voyage, and it was impossible to find out how seriously the children had been injured.

WIFE DEPORTED IN ADVANCE.

Husband Held for a Week Because of Threat to Throw Her Overboard.

Crying that she was afraid that her husband would carry out his threat and throw her overboard, Mrs. Marie Becker begged the immigration officials on Ellis Island yesterday not to send her back to France on the same ship with him. On account of the fear expressed by the woman, Commissioner Williams had her deported yesterday on the French liner La Bretagne, and held her husband, Henri Becker, to sail on the Provence next Thursday.

Mrs. Becker arrived in this country last November with her husband, a cigarette maker. She left him ten days later for another man, and on March 1 was arrested as a disorderly person. She has been on Ellis Island since, pending the decision of appeals she made to Washington.

Her husband will be deported on charges made against him by his wife and the man she eloped with in November. He impressed the immigration officials as being a respectable man, and he had a marriage certificate to show that the couple were married in Paris and testimonials from firms he had worked for. He was mixed up in so discreditable an affair, however, that Commissioner Williams decided that he as well as his wife had better go back to France.

SIX STOWAWAYS CAUGHT.

Hauled Off the Moltke Before She Sails, One with a Broken Skull.

Six young men attempted to secrete themselves as stowaways on the steamer Moltke yesterday while she was lying at her Hoboken pier preparing to sail for Italy. One of them, Francesco Caprito, was badly hurt.

With the five other men he boarded the steamer and they then separated. Policeman John Nicholayson of the Harbor Police found five of the stowaways but could not find the sixth.

Later a steward reported to the Captain that the funnel ventilation was out of order. An examination was made and at the bottom of it wedged in tightly was Caprito. He was removed with ropes. His head struck an iron stanchion and he fell unconscious. At St. Mary's Hospital it was said his skull had been fractured.

CITY BREVITIES.

William Coverly, resident American manager of the Anchor Line, will sail on the Caledonia for Glasgow to-morrow.

Edgar M. Tilt was appointed temporary receiver for the Smith Wholesale Lumber Company of New York in Paterson, N. J., yesterday. The liabilities are said to be about $27,000 and the assets $125,000.

An appeal was sent out yesterday by the Building Employes' Union to all window cleaners to organize as a branch of the union, which takes in the janitors, floor washers, porters, and others in tall buildings.

The body of Alonzo Cavanagh of 821 East 167th Street, the Bronx, was washed ashore yesterday at Midland Beach, S. I., where it was found by a fisherman. Cavanagh was one of the four men in a motor boat off Midland Beach last Sunday. He had a cramp while in swimming.

FLIGHT OF TWO GIRLS PUZZLES CHINATOWN

PAIR QUIT HOME IN NIGHT

Miss Banta, Who Has Been Teaching Them American Ideas, Denies Herself to Inquirers.

Upon being asked yesterday afternoon if he would talk about the disappearance on Wednesday night of his daughter and her girl friend, Moi S. Tighe, dealer in curios and Chinese dry goods at 28 Mott Street, answered cordially:

"Yes, make a big fuss in paper. Have on the front page picture of all the Moi family. Print my initials, M. S. T., where all the people in the street cars will see them."

Moi then set himself down in front of his desk behind a counter and prepared with evident relish for the interview. Calling to Kie, an Americanized brother of Moi You Toy, the missing daughter, the father sent him to the family flat at 34 Mott Street to get a picture of the whole family.

While Kie was gone the father told how Chin Hing, who has a grocery store and curio shop at 34 Mott Street, a few doors above his store, and lives above that number in a flat adjoining that of the Moi family. Chin has two children—a twelve-year-old boy and a fourteen-year-old daughter, Chin Fung Toy.

Chin Fung Toy has been a playmate and chum of Moi S. Tighe's sixteen-year-old daughter, Moi You Toy, who is now so Americanized that she prefers to be called Helen. Miss Chin hasn't got so far along that she prefers an American name.

According to Moi S. Tighe, his daughter Helen, while sticking to the Chinese dress for the most part, likes to wear local styles in clothing. She wears large hats and high-heeled shoes. Chin Fung Toy, the younger girl, he said, had advanced only as far as the shoes.

Miss Mary E. Banta, Superintendent of the Chinese Mission of the East Side Parish of the Methodist Episcopal Church of All Nations, who has an office and living quarters at 291 Bowery, has been teaching the two girls. Asked what she had been teaching them, Moi Tighe replied:

"Bibles, Sunday schools, clothes, reading, and writing. She is fine woman. But she must not take my daughter."

It appeared that on July 5 the two families of Chin and Moi, along with enough other Chinamen to make thirty-five, went out to a farmhouse in East Patchogue for a vacation under the chaperonage of Miss Banta. They came back last Tuesday.

"We all came on elevated train to Chatham Square," went on Moi S. Tighe, "when I said to Miss Banta, 'Thank you for your kindness, Miss Banta,' and shook her hand. I noticed Fung Toy and You Toy stayed behind. Miss Banta went uptown in the train. The girls talked to her and then came on.

"Next morning I wake up early. I see You Toy already up. I noticed it, because she gets up at 8 or 9 o'clock every day. All day You Toy and Fung Toy get together to talk.

"Last night we went to a moving-picture show, but You Toy would not go. She stayed in the house, as she had a headache. She asked Fung Toy, from across hall, to stay with her."

It appeared, however, that the head of the Moi family was uneasy about his 16-year-old daughter who prefers the name of Helen, and so he sent his son Kie back at 9 o'clock to see if all was well. Kie found the flat empty, and, running across to the Chin home, found that Fung Toy was also missing.

A hasty search of both flats showed that the two girls had taken away a suit case full of mixed Chinese and American clothes besides about $10 in money apiece. The heads of the houses of Moi and Chin ran into the streets and raised a great outcry. They heard that the two girls had come out through a gate at 33 Pell Street. No one had seen them after that, as far as they could hear.

The entire Chinese colony was aroused. They ran through all the streets and out on the Bowery. They could hear nothing of the two girls. The two fathers went to the Elizabeth Street Station and threw themselves at the feet of Capt. Galvin, who has an extra large force of policemen stationed in Chinatown now. He sent out more, along with some detectives, to help with the search. They were no more successful than the Chinese.

Moi S. Tighe had gone through a course of reasoning, he indicated yesterday afternoon, which pointed out to him that the two girls could be nowhere else than with Miss Banta. He had gone to her home yesterday morning, he said, and she had said that she did not know where the girls were, but that she would do all she could to help him get them.

Both Moi and Chin denied that the girls had any sweethearts. At the vacation farmhouse there were only two or three Chinese boys, and they were not sweethearts.

Miss Banta could not be seen at the mission house.
